Anglo-German Security Parley Ends in Failure

HITLER UNSHAKEN IN MOVE TO ARM AGAINST EUROPE

Rearmament Must Be Considered Accomplished Fact, London Envoys Are Told by Chancellor of Reich.

EDEN TO PROCEED TO SOVIET CAPITAL

Germany Again Declines To Consider League Reentry Until Related Problems Are Settled.

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER.

BERLIN, March 26.—Anglo-German security discussions ended here late today apparently without providing solutions for any of the major problems imperiling Europe's peace.

Britain's representatives were obviously disappointed, while the Germans seemed as determined as ever in their old demand for complete equality among nations.

A brief, vaguely-phrased official communique revealed little other than the bare fact the conversations, held "in the frankest and friendliest spirit," took up the matters "set out in the London communique of February 3."

Authoritative sources, however, said the highlights of the last day's parley between Sir John Simon and Captain Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary and lord privy seal, and Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler and Baron Konstantin von Neurath, foreign minister, were these:

1.—The Germans insisted that their rearmament be treated as an accomplished fact, held details of their arms program in abeyance, turned arms accusations against Germany's neighbors and hence caused the conversations to deal largely with "armies rather than disarmament."

2.—The reich's representatives again declined to consider re-entering the League of Nations until all related problems have been settled.

3.—Hitler's pet theory that bi-lateral non-aggression pacts are the most effective instruments of peace was presented to the British, while large international gatherings and multilateral pacts were criticized as ineffective.

4.—The Germans objected to the proposed Danubian "non-interference" pact on the grounds that it might mean perpetuations of an Austrian regime to which the Austrian people itself is hostile.

5.—A reported German desire to increase her navy to 400,000 tons received bare mention in the course of the conversations.

A British spokesman, after reading the brief communique, said the question of the proposed six-power meeting, in which Germany was to have participated, "is left entirely for the future."

Difference of Viewpoint.

He further frankly admitted that "it is obvious to anyone that there is a curious difference of viewpoint between our two countries."

"You will notice," he said, "that

HOPKINS EXPECTED TO GET CHIEF ROLE IN RELIEF SET-UP

Administration Victory Is Seen as House Beats Attempt To Force All Amendments.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—(AP)—The road to an almost complete administration victory on the battered $4,880,000,000 relief bill was fashioned today by the house, and, as the path opened, plans crystallized rapidly for spending the huge fund.

Most active in the plan shaping was Harry L. Hopkins, the relief administrator. Strong indications appeared that he would have a heavy hand in the new set-up either as a member or chairman of an administrative board composed of others now prominent in the alphabetical agencies.

The road-opening house, acting at the request of the president, meanwhile moved for either deletion or complete revision of Roosevelt-opposed amendments attached to the bill by the senate. By a crushing 263-to-108 vote, it subdued a silver bloc attempt to force acceptance of all amendments by the other branch.

Thus the bill was sent to conference with the senate, with conferees from both sides gunning particularly for the Thomas silver inflation rider.

Other Developments.

Almost simultaneously there was activity in half a dozen different quarters for throwing the big spending machine into motion as quickly as possible. Developments included:

President Roosevelt, after a protracted canvass of the situation with Hopkins, sent him back to the capital from Jacksonville, Fla., with instructions for initiating the program while he himself embarked on a vacation cruise.

Rexford G. Tugwell, undersecretary of agriculture, emerged as the prob-

SMITH DEPLORES WELTNER DECISION TO RESIGN PLACE

Board Chairman Calls on Members To Persuade Chancellor To Reconsider Resignation.

Chairman Marion Smith of the state board of regents Tuesday called on all members of the board to make every effort to induce Chancellor Philip Weltner to reconsider his decision to resign as chancellor of the University System of Georgia.

Chancellor Weltner announced his resignation, effective June 30, earlier in the day. He said he had not made any future plans, but added that Mrs. Weltner had insisted he give up the post which keeps him out of the city much of his time and in some instances out of the state.

"There ought to be enough intelligence and patriotism in this board to find a way to avoid a disaster of this kind," Chairman Smith asserted in his letters to the board.

Major Disaster.

"If Chancellor Weltner's resignation becomes effective," Mr. Smith said, "it is a major disaster to the university system, and to education in this state.

"It is due to his work alone that we are able to operate the system on the present reduced appropriations, since he has been responsible for the elimination of duplications, and the other steps necessary to maintain us within our budget.

"He has created a spirit of unified loyalty throughout the system which is now dependent upon his leadership, and liable to be dissipated if his resignation stands.

"His work along educational lines is now being copied in other states and universities."

Mr. Smith said that the chancellor, a widely known lawyer, had been serving at a great personal sacrifice. The chairman added that a new chancellor would be selected at a meeting of the regents next month unless Chancellor Weltner reconsiders his action.

"I want and need a rest," Mr. Weltner said in announcing his retirement.

Discussing the affairs of the university system Tuesday, Mr. Weltner said:

Condition Excellent.

"The system is in excellent condition, but of course there are several things we need badly.

"One of the things, of course, that I regret is the inability of the state of Georgia adequately to support the system. I would like very much indeed to be in a position where matriculation and other fees could be lowered, making it possible for many more young people to take advantage of an education.

"New buildings are very badly needed. The state hasn't done much in supplying adequate plants for the university system. A million dollars will go a long way toward meeting this need."

Governor Talmadge had no comment to make on the resignation.

The chancellor has been in office two years, succeeding Charles N. Snelling when the veteran chancellor was named chancellor emeritus two years ago. Prior to his election he served as a member of the board of regents which he helped to set up in the reorganization act of 1931.

He was the organizer and first secretary of the state social welfare department and for many years has taken a deep interest in social service work.

Popular Vote Sought On Liquor Store Plan

Proponents of Key Proposal To Seek Names To Force Referendum Election To Decide Issue.

Repealists will invoke the initiative and referendum to obtain approval of an ordinance empowering Mayor Key to operate a series of municipally owned liquor dispensaries, it was indicated Tuesday as the mayor pointed out Section 215 of the city code making provision for such action.

While Key himself was not ready to take the initiative in the drive, several persons who are interested and who are sponsoring the ordinance, which it was apparent council will turn down at Monday's session, were preparing to take the issue to the people in a special election.

Only 1,850 signatures, or 10 per cent of the 18,491 registered voters in the 1934 general election, are required to make an election mandatory on council, it was pointed out. Plans call for the printing of 5,000 petitions to be circulated with a view of obtaining the 1,850 names by the time council meets Monday.

City Wants Repeal, Claim.

Atlanta wants repeal of the prohibition laws, it was claimed. Key cited the fact that in the September 26 primary last year, a total of 9,441 persons voted for repeal, while only 3,737 cast their ballots against it.

Although Councilman Joseph E. Berman, fourth ward, an ardent advocate of establishment of the liquor stores as a bulwark against establishment of saloons when the state laws are repealed, could not be reached, it was indicated he is ready to aid in placing the matter before the people of Atlanta through the referendum.

In the event Atlantans did vote for the ordinance, it would be passed without a vote of council and Key could proceed to set up his stores, which are not provided for in the repeal law passed by the general assembly. Council could not repeal it, and the only way it could be repealed would be by a vote of the people.

The council, however, might pass the ordinance before the referendum was held and it then would be in the same position as any other council ordinance—subject to repeal by a majority vote of council and approval by the mayor.

Election Within 30 Days.

If the initiative petition is filed with the required number of names, it is mandatory on council to call an election within 30 days after it is filed.

Councilman Aubrey Milam, chairman of the finance committee of council; Alderman J. Sid Tiller, of the third ward, and Alderman I. Gloer Hailey, of the ninth ward, were in the executive offices Tuesday and Key pointed out the initiative and referendum section to them. They all have opposed sanction of the liquor store ordinance at this time.

"Why don't you let me alone about this liquor store business?" Key asked as they came into the office to inquire if he would approve a proposal made in the finance committee meeting to reinstate the five per cent cut imposed on employes of the municipal government making less than $50 a month.

"I will not approve a thing like that. We haven't the money. If we set up the liquor store we can restore the salary cuts made to all city employes. The trouble with you is that you are timid.

Will Not Approve.

"I will tell you now that I will not approve any such action, or anything else which calls for the expenditure of $5,500 as this does with finances in the shape they are now. If you pass it, I'll veto it. If you pass it

TALMADGE VETOES BILL TO STERILIZE CRIMINALS, INSANE

Governor Approves Measure Cutting Interest Rate on Small Loans. Other Bills Delayed.

Governor Talmadge Tuesday vetoed the Arnall-Dyer sterilization bill, after approving the Millican-Rucker measure reducing the interest rates on small loans from 3 1-2 per cent a month to 1 1-2 per cent a month.

The governor refused to approve the sterilization bill after studying it carefully. The measure would have made it possible for the state to sterilize insane persons and inmates of other institutions.

"They made no provision in here to except the governor and the adjutant general," Governor Talmadge said, turning to Adjutant General Lindley W. Camp, when the bill was brought to him for consideration. "Lindley, you and I might go crazy some day and we don't want them working on us."

The chief executive acted on the small loan bill with the same speed, affixing his signature after the first reading.

"Anyone who can't make money lending it at 18 per cent a year ought to go out of business," he commented as he signed the bill.

Telegrams Urge Veto.

The official signature was affixed while more than 1,000 telegrams from over the state urging him to veto the bill rested on his desk. Most of the telegrams said that the reduction in interest rates was too drastic and would force the companies out of business.

Senator G. Everett Millican, of Atlanta, one of the authors of the measure, said it was a "good bill."

"It will not affect existing contracts but it will take care of all made in the future," the senator said. "I think the companies can operate profitably on the new rate."

The governor said he was "caught up with his work." All measures which come to him for consideration must be signed by the speaker of the house and the president of the senate. Speaker E. D. Rivers has been out of the city for two days attending the meeting of the Woodmen of the World in Columbus. He will return this morning.

The sterilization bill was sponsored by Chairman E. E. Lindsay, of the state board of control, a close personal and political friend of the chief executive. Chairman Lindsay said after the bill was vetoed:

"I guess the governor is right. He usually is."

The bill was modeled after the California law and had the indorsement of a large majority of the physicians and surgeons of the state.

Other Bills Signed.

Among acts signed Tuesday by Governor Talmadge were those to:

Require all public school teachers to take oaths of allegiance to the national and state governments and to support the constitutions of state and nation.

Make it a misdemeanor for any person or firm knowingly to advertise or sell planting seed differing in variety to that advertised or so defective as to be worthless.

Provide that no national guardsmen on active duty shall receive less than $1 a day and that the state shall pay up to $150 for funerals of troopers dying from sickness or wounds contracted or received during active service.

Direct the state highway department to pave one mile of roadway in the campus of Georgia State Women's College in Valdosta.

The chief executive vetoed a bill which would have required candidates for the general assembly from Clarke county to specify the particular incumbent whose office he seeks.

"Earl of Pelham"

Robert Lee, alias Earl of Pelham, one of three men indicted by the federal grand jury Tuesday in connection with the American Bond & Share Corporation crash.

PRESIDENT BOARDS SHIP FOR FISHING ON FLORIDA COAST

Roosevelt, After Final Conference With Hopkins, Turns Seaward With Cares Forgotten.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., March 26. (AP)—President Roosevelt rode the rolling Atlantic tonight intent upon a week or two of deep sea fishing.

After a train talk with Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, on plans for making jobs under the impending $4,000,000,000 work relief bill he boarded the new destroyer Farragut here late this afternoon and cruised down the St. Johns river to the open sea.

The care-lined face of the president carried a happy smile as he waved a farewell to the crowd at the Commodore dock, where he has set out to sea on similar cruises at this season for the past two years.

Hopkins turned back to the capital with the final instructions on the work program and Marvin H. McIntyre, presidential secretary, moved on tonight to Miami to establish contact there between the president and the White House.

Aids Left Behind.

Obviously satisfied of assurance of progress in work at Washington, Mr. Roosevelt was unaccompanied by official aids and looked forward to some outdoor relaxation. He started out under a sun which provided mid-summer heat.

Crowds lined the three-mile drive from the station to the dock and waved a greeting. Governor Sholtz, of Florida, and Mayor Alsop, of Jacksonville, officially welcomed Mr. Roosevelt.

Boarding the Farragut, the president went to the foredeck and from the rail chatted with members of the party, who accompanied him from Washington. It was a light-hearted conversation for the vacation-bent president, who is particularly fond of sea travel.

The Farragut was quickly under way, trailed by the destroyer Claxton. Late tonight or possibly tomorrow Mr. Roosevelt expects to meet the yacht Nourmahal of Vincent Astor, which he will board for fishing. This is the same yacht he has ridden on

PLOT TO DEFRAUD BY USE OF MAILS CHARGED TO THREE

Underwood Sets Bonds of $20,000 for Each of Three Officials in American Bond and Share Corporation.

LEE'S TOTAL BOND NOW MADE $30,000

Indictments List 600 Victims With Investments Totaling $550,000 in Georgia Corporation.

Indictment charging Benjamin R. Bradley, fugitive president of the American Bond & Share Corporation; Robert E. Lee, attorney for the company, whose alias was given as "the Earl of Pelham;" J. C. Ingram, secretary-treasurer, and the corporation and its affiliates with conspiracy to violate the United States Securities Act and to use the mails to defraud, was returned by the federal grand jury Tuesday afternoon before Judge E. Marvin Underwood.

The indictment contained a partial list of more than 600 alleged victims of the conspiracy, whose investments totaled $550,000. It was admitted that this was only a partial list and that the total amount invested in American Bond & Share and its affiliates may run into the millions.

Lee, listed in the indictment under the alias of "the Earl of Pelham" because of his claim to descent from English nobility, is in federal custody, his bond totaling $30,000. Ingram, who is at liberty under $500 in a state indictment, was to have been arrested late Tuesday night, while Bradley is the object of a nation-wide search by federal agents.

The indictment charges that salesmen for the American Bond & Share represented Lee as a lawyer of international reputation specializing in financial problems and also told prospective investors he was a descendant of William the Conqueror and in reality the Earl of Pelham.

$20,000 Bonds Set.

Following return of the indictment by the grand jury, Judge Underwood fixed the bonds of each of the three defendants at $20,000. Lee, already under arrest on a federal warrant charging him with using the mails to defraud, was given a preliminary hearing on that charge by United States Commissioner James E. Brown, of Newnan, who fixed the attorney's bond at $10,000, making a total of $30,000. Following the hearing in commissioner's court, Lee was returned to the DeKalb county jail.

The indictment specifically named Bradley, Lee, Ingram, the American Bond & Share Corporation of Georgia, the American Bond & Share Corporation of Delaware, the American Bond & Trust Co. of Delaware and American Participations, Inc., of Delaware.

600 Investors Listed.

Appended to the indictment, which totaled 76 pages, was a list of more than 600 investors in American Bond & Share of Delaware. The largest investor on the list was Mrs. Margaret B. Peace, of 126 Palisades road, who invested $42,950. A list of 50 major alleged victims showed their losses totaling $237,600.

The 600 persons represent only a portion of the total investors. United States District Attorney Lawrence Camp has knowledge of one investor who put $47,000 into American Bond & Share of whom there is no record in the corporation's offices.

The indictment specifically charges that between July 27, 1933, and the date the indictment was returned, the defendants conspired to violate the securities act and also conspired to use the mails to defraud. It further charges that Bradley, Lee and Ingram owned and controlled a majority of stock in the American Bond & Share Corporation of Georgia.

Claimed He Was Earl.

Lee was listed under several

U. S. TO DISMISS NRA TEST APPEAL

F. D. R. Orders Prompt and Vigorous Action on Violators of Act.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—(AP)—A presidential order for "prompt and vigorous" action against NRA code violators was quickly interpreted tonight in some capital quarters as designed to offset the effect of the administration's deliberate decision to avoid the pending supreme court test of the Blue Eagle agency.

With little advance warning, the justice department announced it would dismiss the Belcher case, which the government lost in the lower court and which was expected to furnish the answer to the query: Is NRA constitutional?

The explanation by the government's legal leaders was that the case involved the lumber code; that this agreement was so "weak" its legality had been doubted even in federal circles.

In brief, the department, through Attorney-general Cummings and Solicitor-General Reed, took the attitude they would like to test NRA's constitutionality with a better code on which to base their arguments.

The aftermath of such a decision had been under careful study, since NRA enforcement, or lack of it, had added to the mounting worries of the Blue Eagle organization during recent months.

Reason for Letter.

All surface indications were that Mr. Roosevelt's letter, addressed to Donald Richberg and made public by him, was drafted to prevent withdraw-

RELIEF LIST DROPS AS BUSINESS GAINS

Shrinkage in Cases on State Rolls Reflects Trade Increase.

Reflecting the steady improvement in business conditions in Georgia, the number of cases on the rolls of the Georgia Emergency Relief Administration declined 1,284 in February, it was announced Tuesday by Miss Gay B. Shepperson, relief administrator.

The decrease is remarkable in view of the fact that February is generally regarded as the peak month in unemployment. March figures should show an even greater decline, inasmuch as agriculture in the southern half of the state is putting many men to work.

On February 28 there were only 78,811 cases on relief in Georgia, representing a drop from 80,095 in January and 98,052 in November. A portion of this decline of nearly 20,000 is attributed to the shifting of unemployables to the care of the state, and the placing of still other families in the rural rehabilitation division. These do not account for all the decrease, however.

Families in the rural rehabilitation division are not considered on direct relief, inasmuch as the funds they receive are loans which are being repaid as the families become self-supporting. There were 9,245 families in the rural rehabilitation division in this state on February 28, and this number is being steadily increased through shifts from direct relief.

The first two weeks in March showed a still further decline in the number of families on relief as seasonal employment removed heads of families from the rolls. It is believed that this decline will continue.

Louis Howe Reported Further Improved

WASHINGTON, March 26.—(UP) Colonel Louis McHenry Howe, secretary to President Roosevelt, who has been desperately ill, at the White House, maintained the improvement today that he has shown for the last two days, the White House announced.

Dr. Robert G. Duncan, heart and lung specialist who examined Howe this morning, said his pulse was firm and the general improvement continued.

He ate a breakfast of coffee and cereal.

Connecticut Rejects Ban on Child Labor

WASHINGTON, March 26.—(AP) Rejection of the child labor amendment by the Connecticut house today caused its friends to concede it would take another two years of fighting to put it over, and its foes to call it definitely dead.

Connecticut was the sixteenth state to reject the amendment this year, the eleventh year it has been making the rounds of state legislatures.

Four states ratified this year, bringing the number of approvals up to 24, with ratification by 36 necessary to add the amendment to the constitution.

Counterfeiting Plot Sends Three to Pen

A counterfeiting plot hatched within the gray stone walls of the Atlanta federal prison resulted in new prison sentences ranging from six to four years being meted out Tuesday by Judge E. Marvin Underwood to three defendants.

The trio and their sentences were: Luis Edourdo DeShelley, native of Venezuela, 6 years; William E. Bartlett, of Atlanta, 6 years, and Jennings Bryan Dodson, of Atlanta, 4 years.

Entering pleas of guilty to counterfeiting silver half dollars DeShelley and Bartlett admitted that they had been inmates of the Atlanta prison and that they had conceived the counterfeiting plot there. Both were serving sentences for the same offense. DeShelley told Judge Underwood that they had planned to branch out after flooding the market with half-dollars and intended to commence the manufacture of bank notes.

The three were arrested by secret service agents March 17.

Price of Silver Hits Highest Level Since '28

NEW YORK, March 26.—(AP)—The price of silver in New York today reached 61 1-4 cents an ounce, 1 1-4 cents above yesterday's price, and the highest quotation since August 26, 1928, when the price was 63 5-8 cents.

Today's price was within 3 1-4 cents of the price paid by the United States treasury for newly mined domestic silver.

Culbertsons Take the Lead In Bridge Match by 1,750

By ELY CULBERTSON.

CROCKFORD CLUB, NEW YORK CITY, March 26.—The spade, heart, diamond and club-spangled flag atop this citadel of bridge is again flying from the very tip of the staff after having been lowered all day. Mrs. Culbertson and I now lead the Hal Simses by 1,750 points, after being behind 4,730 points when play was recessed for dinner tonight after the ninth rubber. We had begun play in the afternoon trailing by 2,200 points as a result of the first four rubbers played Monday night.

I am $25 out of pocket as a result of being five minutes late this afternoon, but we are 1,750 points ahead and although financially poorer I shall sleep better tonight despite some very loose playing on my part this afternoon.

Mrs. Culbertson and I won the final two rubbers played tonight, the 13th and 14th, to wipe out Hal's lead which we had cut down to 530 points at the end of the twelfth rubber when a short recess was called.

We won the tenth rubber with 1,110 points, the eleventh with a margin of 2,040 and the twelfth with 1,150. We had started the afternoon 2,200 points behind and lost 2,530 on five rubbers when Hal and Mrs. Sims won the first with 1,820 when Mrs. Culbertson and I were set five times, the second with a margin of 200 more points, the fourth with 630 points and the fifth with 900 points. We won the third by a margin of 620.

I have seldom played worse bridge than I did in the afternoon session. The flag was drooping even lower than half-mast in the afternoon, for we were 4,730 points in the hole when we quit for dinner, most of it due, not to the brilliant play of our opponents, but to some of the atrocious bids and plays perpetrated in my own inimitable style. So childishly did I play one rubber that my wife, whose confidence in me reaches the absurd heights of total blindness, was visibly shaking. I not only threw the entire Culbertson system to the winds but

TUGWELL TO GUIDE NEW LAND PLANS

Co-ordinated Program in Final Stages of Formation.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—(AP)—A national, co-ordinated land-use program under the direction of the administration's No. 1 planner, Rexford G. Tugwell, today was in the final stages of formation.

Tugwell, undersecretary of agriculture, is to head a concentration of present government agencies concerned with land use. He probably will do the work without any new designation of authority or title.

At present, a large number of government bureaus are administering policies which, officials concede, are oftentimes conflicting or duplicating because of lack of a central directing force.

Dissatisfaction with the progress of the government's purchase program for submarginal land has been expressed frequently by officials. They contend that little more than a beginning has been made on the job of relief of farm families, rehablitation and permanent adjustment of agricultural production.

The figure for the new program has not been determined, although approximately $1,000,000,000 may be required.

Officials reminded that around $950,000,000 was roughly limited for such work in the $4,880,000,000 relief bill. A half-billion was tentatively set aside for rural rehabilitation; $100,000,000 for rural electrification and $350,000,000 for soil erosion, reforestation and flood control.

With another prospective drouth and the worst dust storms in many years as a spur, the decision was made to place the land-use program under a central authority and drive ahead with funds from the pending $4,880,000,000 works relief bill.

All Concentrated.

Most of the land agencies, the soil erosion service; AAA; forest service, and Bureaus of Chemistry and Soils, Agricultural Engineering, Plant Industry and Biological Survey, are already concentrated in the Department of Agriculture.

However, the Department of the Interior has the grazing administration and the subsistence homesteads division.

Rural rehabilitation is under the relief administration and the land purchasing section of the AAA.

The soil erosion service was transferred to the Department of Agriculture only yesterday and a probability existed that some other agencies also might be shifted.

They would fall under the immediate direction of Undersecretary Tugwell, whose present job is administering detail work of the department.

INDUSTRIAL RATE OFF IN FEBRUARY

Increase, However, Is Shown in Automobile Output in Month.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—(AP)—Although automobiles were being turned out at an unusual rate, industrial output in Febrary was reported today to have lagged behind the ordinary seasonal upturn for the month.

In its monthly summary of business and financial conditions, the Federal Reserve Board announced that the board's index—with allowances for seasonal variation—declined from 91 per cent of the 1923-25 average in January to 89 per cent in February.

The Department of Commerce, meanwhile, made public figures which showed that exports during February fell less than they customarily do for the month but that imports declined more than the averages of past years.

The exports, valued at $163,000,000, dropped 7 per cent as compared to January but were higher than those in February last year. The usual decline in February, as compared to January, is 11 per cent.

Imports Decline.

Imports during February were $152,537,000, a decline of 9 per cent from January as compared to the ordinary 2 per cent slump.

The report said exports of agricultural commodities declined much more by comparison than did manufactured products.

The reserve board said that steel mill activity increased during the early part of February but later in the month and in the first three weeks of March declined, contrary to seasonal tendency.

In the automobile industry, production continued to increase and "the output indicated for the first quarter is larger than in the corresponding period of any ohter eyar since 1929," the report said.

Lumber production remained at a low level during the month. Textile mill activity declined somewhat from the relatively high level of the previous month, and the meat packing industry output likewise lessened.

Employment Gains.

Factory employment, the report said, increased between the middle of January and mid-February by more than the usual seasonal amount, reflecting substantial increases in the automobile, machinery, iron and steel and wearing apparel industries, and smaller increases in many other lines.

Employment at meat packing establishments continued to decline, and at tobacco factories it showed less than the usual seasonal growth.

Pay rolls at manufacturing establishments increased considerably during the month, the board said, but in non-manufacturing industries employment as well as pay rolls showed little change.

Wholesale prices of many leading commodities showed little change in February and declined in the early part of March, the board said.

Prices of livestock and meats, however, advanced further in February and continued at relatively high levels during the first three weeks of March.

LOCAL MINISTERS PROTEST PLANNED NAVAL MANEUVERS

Protest against the proposed naval maneuvers by the United States in the northern Pacific waters during May and June was wired to President Roosevelt Tuesday by the Atlanta Presbyterian Ministers' Association.

"We fear that such an action will be considered unfriendly by the nation nearest the place of the maneuvers, that our international relationship will become strained and our peace imperiled," the telegram said.

"Surely our nation does not desire to do anything at this critical moment in the history of the world which would bring on or hasten an armed conflict or another World War.

"We believe America should lead in the cause of peace and we send you this telegram of protest in the spirit of true patriotism as well as of Christianity."

The message was signed by Dr. D. P. McGeachy, Dr. Richard Orme Flinn, Dr. J. Sprole Lyons and Dr. Stuart R. Oglesby.

NELSON TO TESTIFY BEFORE COMMITTEE

Claud Nelson, southern secretary of the Fellowship of Reconcilation, left Tuesday night for Washington where he will testify before the house military affairs committee on proposed legislation limiting the use of federal military equipment by national guards in strike situations. Mr. Nelson conducted a survey this winter on the activities of troops in three southern states during the recent textile strike.

The report by Mr. Nelson was sponsored by a committee which included Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina; Will W. Alexander, of the Commission on Interracial Co-operation; E. McNeil Poteat Jr., pastor Pullen Baptist Memorial church, Raleigh, N. C.; W. Aiken Smart, of Emory University, and others.

He was well known in Atlanta but had resided for the last six years in Texas, having returned here only a few weeks ago. He was a deputy under Sheriff Wheeler Mangham, and at one time was connected with the Harry G. Poole undertaking establishment.

Mr. Owen was a member of St. Anthony's church, the B. P. O. Elks, the Atlanta City Salesmen's Association and the Travelers' Protective Association.

Surviving are his wife; four sons, A. R. and John H. Owen Jr., of Tucson, Ariz., and Harold and J. W. Owen, of San Antonio, Texas; two daughters, Mrs. G. E. Patureau and Mrs. Ed Bushau; a brother, J. S. Owen, and a sister, Miss Mary L. Owen, of Atlanta.

LAST SERVICES TODAY FOR E. W. STURDIVANT

Funeral services for E. W. Sturdivant, prominent businessman who was killed by an automobile Monday night, will be conducted at 11 o'clock this morning.

Rites will be held at Spring Hill, and Dr. E. G. Mackay, pastor of the First Methodist church, will officiate. Burial will be in West View cemetery.

Mr. Sturdivant was fatally injured crossing the street in front of his home at 826 Peachtree street when he was hit by a car driven by J. H. Fulghum, of 918 Peachtree street. He died in a hospital.

A resident of Atlanta 20 years, he was chairman of the board of the Collins Baking Company, and formerly was secretary and treasurer of the American Bakeries Company.

KEY ASKS STATUS OF TECHWOOD, INC., WHEN COMPLETED

Mayor Key Tuesday insisted that the federal government define the status of Techwood, Inc., the government's low-cost housing project being prosecuted here.

In a letter to Colonel Horatio B. Hackett, director of housing, PWA, he asked the government's attitude as to whether completed projects will be considered a government reservation, barred to police authority of the city. He said if the government is going to refuse to pay taxes on the properties and to consider them government property, they will not succeed as they would be populated with undesirables.

"Speaking personally and having in mind the social betterment of our community, rather than have a condition like that exist, I would rather not have it (Techwood) at all," his letter said in part.

Chemist To Analyze Alleged Poison Liquor

Chemical analysis of a bottle of whisky labeled "Royal Oak" and bearing alleged government stamps will be made by the state chemist at the request of city police.

Action of Chief T. O. Sturdivant in launching an investigation into the quality of whisky being sold here came as the result of two men being treated at Grady hospital for paralysis which followed drinking liquor bearing the Royal Oak brand.

C. T. Osborne, 48, of 1073 Mecasslin street, was reported in "fair" condition Tuesday at the hospital. Tom Rayner, 40, of Alpharetta, was allowed to return to his home.

Osborne suffered partial paralysis after taking three small drinks and for a time his condition was considered critical. Both he and Rayner were admitted to the hospital Monday.

Aubrey Smith, Leland Harvey Seek Defense Fund in Macon

Aubrey Smith and Leland Harvey, joint holders of the title of Georgia's Public Enemy No. 1, under federal indictment in the $9,875 robbery of the National City bank of Rome, are attempting to raise a defense fund in Macon, Smith's home, maintaining that they are innocent men about to be railroaded to prison and that they are absolutely penniless.

Smith, who with Harvey, is being held in Fulton tower pending removal to Rome for trial in the federal district court next month, recently sent a written appeal to Macon residents asking that they contribute to a defense fund to enable the pair to pay attorney's fees.

In the appeal, Smith charged that an attempt was being made to "frame" him and his associate. He pointed out that his mother died in a charity ward of a hospital three days after the Rome bank robbery on August 23, 1934.

"Do you think I would have let her die in a charity ward if I had just robbed a bank of $10,000. No, nor would any other man with $10,000 let his mother die in a charity ward," he wrote.

Smith pointed out that he and Harvey had less than $200 when arrested in Virginia several months ago, and said that it was paid to a Richmond attorney.

"People, we are appealing to the public to help two innocent men and save them from a great injustice," Smith said in concluding his appeal. "If we do not get help we will be railroaded to prison for we have no lawyers or money to bring our witnesses here."

The letter to Macon directed that all contributions be sent to Harry S. Strozier, Georgia Casualty building, Macon.

"Sure, enjoy yourself," said Jim. "It's a ding good cigarette."

I was working way late at the office one night and ran out of cigarettes. When Jim the watchman came through I tackled him for a smoke.

"Sure," says Jim, and he handed over a pack of Chesterfields. "Go ahead, Mr. Kent, take three or four."

Jim said he'd smoked a lot of cigarettes in his time, but he'd put Chesterfield up in front of any of 'em when it came to taste.

... "and they ain't a bit strong either," is the way Jim put it.

That was the first Chesterfield I ever smoked. And I'm right there with him, too, when he says it's a ding good cigarette.

JAPAN TO GUARD PEACE IN ORIENT

Eastern Empire Officially Quits Membership in League Today.

TOKYO, Tuesday, March 26.—(UP)—Japan's membership in the League of Nations ends officially tomorrow.

Flanked by her single avowed ally, Manchukuo, she faces the world as the self-chosen preserver of peace in the orient.

Final termination of her membership in the League completes action started February 24, 1933, when dapper Yosuke Matsuoka led the entire Japanese delegation in a walkout from the League assembly. On March 27 of that year Japan formally gave notice of her withdrawal from the League assembly's censure of Japanese aggression in Manchuria during 1931 and 1932.

Japan has advised other powers in blunt terms that she considers herself guardian of the peace of east Asia, with outside assistance little desired and not invited. She has embarked on an armament policy marked by denunciation of the Washington naval treaty, demands for naval parity with Great Britain and the United States, and armed forces "sufficient to defend, but inadequate to attack."

Buys Railroad.

Japan completed arrangements for purchase of Russia's half interest in the Chinese Eastern Railway by Manchukuo. She has braved charges of closing the "open door" in east Asia by establishing stringent regulations governing foreign oil companies in Japan, and Manchukuo has announced a government oil monopoly, effective April 10, within its boundaries.

The diet has approved Japan's largest peace-time budget, with 49 per cent devoted to the army and navy departments.

Finally Japan has declared flatly that she never will relinquish mandated Pacific islands given her under terms of the Versailles treaty, and has intimated she will brook no discussion of the territories.

House in Order.

Thus, Japan's official house has been placed in order for March 27, when she resolutely turns her face to the rest of the world with an act tantamount to blunt proclamation of her leadership in east Asia.

Chinese officialdom in Peiping and Tientsin further fears that plans now are afoot for Japanese encroachment, with Japan allegedly inciting Chinese troublemakers to such outrages that further military intervention will be "required."

Foreign Minister Koki Hirota and other cabinet members continually have stressed Japanese desires for peace, however.

Japan faces Russia more sanguinely now. Russia has indicated willingness to discuss demilitarization along the Siberian-Manchukuo border, a move that would relieve Japan of a tremendous military burden.

"Japan's withdrawal from the League of Nations will become effective March 27, and ours will be a greater burden of responsibility, but the road for Japan to take has long been chosen," Hirota told the last session of the imperial diet January 22, 1935.

Japan steps down that road tomorrow.

JAPAN TO CONTINUE REPORTS ON MANDATE

GENEVA, March 26.—(AP)—Japan formally ends 15 years membership in the League of Nations tomorrow night but many bonds still tie her to Geneva.

Even though the "notice of withdrawal" filed March 27, 1933, after the League condemned Japan's military action in Manchuria becomes effective tomorrow, the far eastern empire retains the mandate of former German possessions in the Pacific.

Matsayuki Yokoyama, Japanese consul general at Geneva, assured League officials today that his nation would continue to collaborate with the League in every possible way.

"Japan will continue to present annual reports to the mandate commission," he said. "This was approved by the league council when it took note of the Japanese delegates' announcement that Japan would give detailed replies to questions raised by the commission."

BERLIN PARLEY ENDS IN FAILURE

the communique does not suggest that we have reached a common point of view. We are nevertheless quite convinced that this direct method of meeting was the right thing and we are justified in bi-lateral meetings."

Only at Stresa, where Italian, French and British representatives will meet next month, "will the picture begin to take shape," the spokesman continued.

"What we are doing here is getting one piece of the picture. Eden now proceeds to Moscow, Warsaw and Praha, where he will get more pieces.

"Then at London he will piece all his information together and this, together with what Premier Benito Mussolini and Foreign Minister Pierre Laval, of France, will have to offer (at Stresa), will constitute a complete picture of the international situation."

The spokesman, who made it clear that the British delegation leaves Berlin with nothing in the way of any general agreement, asserted that he "never for a moment expected to reach such an agreement here."

"Our visit was to be purely exploratory," he said, "and such it remains."

In view of recent events, he continued, it was high time to "get to close quarters and meet Hitler irrespective of what we found."

The British spokesman said four subjects involved in the Anglo-French communique issued at London early in February were discussed: security, armaments, the League of Nations and the air alliance for western Europe.

"While we were obliged to protest with the other powers (against Germany's reinstitution of military conscription), we took the view that as long as the topics for discussion remained the same as in the London communique we should come to Berlin," he continued.

Complicated Problem.

He described the problem of settling European affairs as "an exclusively complicated business."

Despite the efforts of the British delegation to look pleased at the result of the two-day parley, there was little doubt that Simon, who returns to London by air tomorrow, and Eden, who leaves tonight for the eastern capitals, are going away disappointed they came to Berlin Sunday with these two principal aims:

1.—To induce Germany to return to the League.

2.—To influence Germany's rearmament program in the sense of getting from her information as to what the future strength of her army, navy and air fleet might be.

They gained neither point, it was reliably said, and so Sir John, in his capacity as "honest broker" in continental affairs, will go to the Anglo-Franco-Italian conference at Stresa, Italy, April 11 possessing only general restatements of the German viewpoint.

The brief, non-informative official communique summed up the results of the two-day conference as follows:

"The subjects under discussion were the matters set out in the London communique February 3. The conversations were carried on in the frankest and friendliest spirit and resulted in complete clarification of each other's viewpoints.

"Both sides agreed that they were pursuing the goal of securing and consolidating the peace of Europe by promoting international co-operation.

"Both the German and British ministers are satisfied of the usefulness of these direct conversations."

The German stand on the League of Nations issue had been often expressed before the British visit, and their contention that problems allied with it must be solved before the reich can return to Geneva was unshaken.

France, it was said, made Germany's adherence to this viewpoint easier by her decision last week to accuse Germany before the League council of violating the Versailles treaty.

At Stresa, therefore, the British must explain to the Italian and French that Germany will not consider the League question until all her other wishes or conditions are fulfilled, one of the most important of these being Germany's complete equality with other nations.

The fact that the League will judge Germany runs counter to this German concept of equality, it was stated.

During the conversations, Hitler also took opportunity to point out that Germany considers the League as at present constituted and operated not as an effective instrument for peace but as the instrument of force of one group of nations.

On the question of rearmament, the German Fuehrer appeared successful in his effort to turn that issue back upon his questioners.

Cites Arms of Neighbors.

Instead of disclosing Germany's military plans as the British hoped he would, he was reported to have produced facts and figures showing the arms strength of Germany's neighbors and sought to put up to other powers the responsibility of initiating arms limitation.

The foreign office told correspondents Hitler again declared Germany willing to scrap her last cannon if others do likewise. As long as others are armed, however, he insists upon arming also both for self-protection and to symbolize Germany's insistence on equal rights, it was explained.

At Stresa, therefore, the British must tell their co-conferees that Germany is holding details of her armaments program in abeyance pending the decision of others as to what they intend to do about their armaments.

In the general discussion of Europe's problems Hitler made no secret of the reich's aversion to large international conferences or bulky multilateral pacts, pointing to the German-Polish non-aggression pact as an example of the efficacy of bi-lateral agreements and citing the London naval conversations as evidence of the inefficiency of large meetings.

A non-aggression pact with Austria, the reichsfuehrer contended, would be the best means of settling Austro-German differences. The proposed Danubian pact, he said, was unacceptable because:

1. It might mean perpetuation of an Austrian regime irrespective of whether the people approved it;
2. It might stand in the way of an amicable settlement between Germany and Austria;
3. It leaves undefined the question of what constitutes "interference" in Austrian affairs.

In this last connection Hitler was said to have been "shocked" at Italy's reply to the German question, propounded before the Anglo-German conversations, as to who, in Benito Mussolini's opinion, should decide whether anyone was interfering with Austria.

Mussolini's answer, it was stated, was that Austria should decide. This Hitler rejected as untenable.

When Eden departs for Moscow tonight, he may take with him the certainty that Germany fears nothing so much as an arrangement that may oblige Germany to go to the aid of soviet Russia or accept aid from the communist power.

All talk of an eastern Locarno, such as France desires, for mutual assistance was therefore taboo, so that Simon could do no more than obtain Hitler's categorical assertion that Germany has no intention now or in the future of waging aggressive warfare against Russia.

In return for that, Simon volunteered that the clause providing for mutual assistance ought—so far as the British are concerned—be omitted from the proposed regional agreement.

Lee Claimed Distinguished Family In Interview Three Months Ago

By RALPH T. JONES.

Robert Lee, alias the "Earl of Pelham," under federal indictment for use of the mails to defraud and conspiracy to violate the federal securities act in connection with the crash of the American Bond & Share Corporation, made no mention of any claim to nobility when interviewed some three months ago.

Possibly he overlooked the matter because, in the course of more than an hour's conversation, he claimed pretty nearly every other distinction for himself or his family. Incidentally the interview developed promptly into a monologue with the reporter on the receiving end.

Lee claimed to be born in Virginia and explained a nebulous sort of relationship to the beloved General Robert E. Lee. The family details, however, are too involved to be readily intelligible.

He said he came to Atlanta "seeking a more equable climate," after a career as corporation lawyer in New York and Washington, D. C. Stated he has tuberculosis of the spine and explained the scars on his face as shrapnel wounds received in the war. Asked as to his regimental connection he said he was "liaison officer attached to American army headquarters."

Official Files Searched.

Search of the files of both Veterans' Bureau and the war office at Washington, however, reveal that only two Robert E. Lee's served in the United States army during the World War. One of these did not get overseas at all and the other is now a reserve officer in Texas.

Lee refused to have a photograph made, attributing his reluctance to extreme sensitiveness about the facial scars.

"When I was young I considered myself the most handsome youth that ever walked in the tidewater counties of Virginia," he said. "Now my own face is abhorrent to me. There are no mirrors in my home, except one small shaving glass, so that I may see myself as little as possible."

Lee said he married the daughter of the Deemster of the Isle of Man, but that his wife died while he was in France.

"At the time I felt fate had been unutterably cruel in taking my beautiful young bride from me," he said, "but later I realized it was better so and I have often thanked God for His kindness in taking her before she had seen my disfigurement. Because she had been so proud of my appearance."

Family Prodigy.

Lee declared a member of his family had written a "romantic history of the times of Queen Elizabeth" at the age of 14 and that this volume was used in "the high schools of England." This same youthful prodigy, he stated, was managing editor or city editor of several of the largest newspapers in Chicago and New York while still in his 'teens, that he married the daughter of Charles Dana Gibson, and "died at the age of 28. Period. I say "period" because his passing brought to a complete stop, for the time being, the activities of the entire family."

Lee said his grandmother was the wife of a "Prince Rupprecht" and that an ancestor of his named "de Lys" commanded the Norman forces at the Battle of Hastings and received high honor and titles for this victory. Another ancestor, he declared, won supreme military fame for his strategy while leading the Crusaders against the Saracenic forces in the Holy Land.

Has Two Hobbies.

His hobbies, he said, are "playing upon a grand piano and writing poetry. Some of my verse has been acclaimed as worthy of immortality while other, I fear, is the merest twaddle."

Lee says he was educated in Brooks Academy, New York; at the law school of McGill University in Toronto, and did post-graduate work at Heidelberg, Germany.

"I speak perfect English," he asserted, "classic German and the associate languages with precision though at times perhaps slightly faulty pronunciation."

But he never mentioned the Earldom of Pelham.

4 NIZIS SENTENCED TO DIE IN LITHUANIA

KAUNAS, Lithuania, March 26.—(AP)—Four nazi leaders accused of directing a plot to seize the former German town of Memel and return it to the reich, were sentenced today to die before a firing squad.

The men, Emil Boll, Walter Preiss, Heinrich Wannagat and Emil Lepa, were four of a group of 126 nazis to go on trial before a military court.

Two of those accused were sentenced to life imprisonment, 35 were acquitted, and the sentences of the others convicted ranged from 1 to 12 years in prison and in many cases confiscation of property.

It was expected that the death sentences, which raised a storm of protest in Germany, would be commuted to life imprisonment.

MONKEY BITES WAY TO NEWS COLUMNS 3 TIMES IN WEEK

"Tillie," the little monkey that has appeared in the news twice during the past week made a pass for a third story Tuesday afternoon when she sent Betty Ann Collins, three-year-old daughter of Mrs. J. B. Collins, of 615 Chestnut street, owner of the monkey, to the hospital for treatment for "monkey bites."

The pet first broke into the news as a kidnap victim when Mrs. Collins requested police to search for the animal which, she said, had been stolen from the front porch of the home. The animal was located in a booth at the Washington street market Sunday and was returned to Mrs. Collins by city detectives. "Tillie" promptly bit Mrs. Collins on the arm soon after being returned to the house, rating story number two in the local papers.

The monkey bites on Betty Ann Collins' legs were treated and the child was dismissed, according to hospital reports.

aliases, including Robert E. S. Lee and "the Earl of Pelham." It was explained that the attorney insisted he had a rightful claim to the title of the Earl of Pelham.

The preliminary hearing on charges against Lee, which opened Monday afternoon came to an abrupt halt when the grand jury indictment was returned. Assistant District Attorney Neil Andrews immediately rested his case and Clint W. Hager, Lee's counsel, did not call any witnesses, although a dozen had been summoned to appear on behalf of the lawyer.

Commissioner Brown ordered Lee held in bond of $10,000, which was a reduction from the $20,000 bond under which he has been held in custody since his arrest Saturday. It is expected that an attempt will be made to raise the $30,000 bond necessary for his release.

Warrants Are Issued.

Jon Dean Steward, clerk of the court, immediately issued bench warrants for the arrest of Ingram, Lee and Bradley. Little difficulty was anticipated in obtaining the surrender of Ingram, while Lee is already in custody. Bradley, however, is a fugitive from justice.

The American Bond & Share president disappeared while preliminary investigation of the corporation by Securities Commission investigators was in progress.

A nation-wide search is in progress for Bradley. J. W. Cole, in charge of the regional postoffice inspectors' office, declined to divulge just what steps had been taken to apprehend Bradley, but he admitted that one of the most intensive searches in the history of the postoffice department was in progress.

"Naturally, I cannot reveal just what we are doing, but you may rest assured a real manhunt is in progress," Mr. Cole said. "I feel confident that sooner or later Bradley will be taken into custody."

HOPKINS IS SEEN AS RELIEF CHIEF

able head of a national, co-ordinated land-use program to which some of the $4,000,000,000 work fund would be allotted.

Secretary Ickes asserted his own Public Works Administration was "better qualified than any other" agency to handle the $450,000,000 projected for housing under the bill.

A national inventory of work-making jobs was virtually completed by the PWA, which listed 128,000 projects that would cost $19,500,000,000. Relief Administration officials said their own compilation came to about the same totals.

Rural Electrification.

Frank R. McNinch, chairman of the Federal Power Commission, reported there would be wide use of the $100,000,000 proposed for rural electrification, since 5,544,694 farms of an estimated 6,288,648 in the United States are not served by central electric power stations.

On Capitol Hill, meanwhile, as the senate-house conferees prepared to open the battle over amendments, one administration source asserted that Hopkins would have the chief responsibility for the spending of the work-relief fund.

The same man, who asked that his name not be used, asserted that Secretary Ickes would play only a comparatively minor role. While he indicated Hopkins alone might have the responsibility, reports in other quarters were that a board would be set up. Among others mentioned for membership were Ickes, Tugwell, Robert Fechner, chief of the CCC, and Admiral Christian J. Peoples, now with the treasury procurement division, who helped guide the bill through the senate.

Scorn for Huey Long.

Before the house sent the bill to conference today it not only listened to jibes at Senator Huey Long and the senate leadership but had its 263-to-108 vote against the attempt by the house silver bloc to force acceptance of all the senate amendments.

The three-hour wrangle was over a resolution rejecting the senate amendments and sending the bill to conference. After it was over, and the shouts of "gag rule" died down, Speaker Byrns named a conference committee of four democrats and two republicans who will sit with a group of senators and attempt to compromise differences between the two houses.

It was an open secret that house conferees would insist upon the discard of many of the senate's 30 amendments, and especially the Thomas silver amendment. Just after he was named chief house conferee, Representative Buchanan, democrat, Texas, walked hurriedly off the floor and told a newspaperman who trailed at his heels:

"Those senate amendments will either have to be knocked out or completely rewritten."

Doubtful Amendments.

The understanding was that the house conferees at least would be particularly dubious about leaving in the final draft of the bill:

1. The Thomas amendment, which requires the treasury to issue currency against silver at its statutory value of $1.29 instead of the purchase price, which averages somewhere around 50 cents an ounce.
2. The McCarran amendment, requiring senate confirmation of jobholders under the bill who got more than $5,000 a year.
3. The George amendment, which would let any portion of the $4,880,000,000 be available for administration of the farm adjustment act.

There was a possibility that the last two would be accepted in modified form, but Buchanan, in debate, singled them out as "impracticable."

The debate about Senator Long and the senate leadership was started by references to Long's threat to filibuster if the bill was reported back to the senate without the Thomas amendment.

Cheers for O'Connor.

On the floor below, Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, senate democratic leader, was having luncheon with the Pennsylvania congressional delegation when red-haired Representative O'Connor, democrat, New York, strode into the well.

Members remembered that the Thomas amendment was accepted by senate leaders last Saturday, in order to get the bill passed, when they heard that Long was about to fly back to Washington to filibuster. And they laughed and cheered when O'Connor, a tough man to handle in debate, remarked:

"I for one do not intend to match demagogy with demagogy.

"This great house can legislate expeditiously and in more orderly fashion without the fear of any one man coming by train or airplane and without the fear of any one group.

"We do not rush things through to get under the wire before somebody returns to town. We are told that they will filibuster in the other body. Well, we have always been able to handle filibusters in this body."

"They're afraid of Huey over there!" shouted a member, his identity lost among the nearly 400 members present.

O'Connor grinned but didn't answer. On the floor, Buchanan referred to the "mighty" senate wanting to confirm the men selected to handle the $4,880,000,000. But outside, there was considerable additional talk among members who wondered what effect the McCarran confirmation amendment might have on the reported administrative set-up.

Neither Hopkins, Tugwell or Ickes have had especially friendly relations with house members, who wondered whether that would be reflected in any senate confirmation votes.

TRANSIENTS WORKING ON ROOT OF CONDITION

Transients in Georgia are working 30 hours a week to remove the causes of transiency.

J. Arthur Fynn, director of the transient bureau of the Georgia Emergency Relief Administration, expressed this opinion here Tuesday in outlining plans of the bureau. The work is a branch of the Georgia Emergency Relief Administration, of which Miss Gay B. Shepperson is administrator.

Transients in the five camps and five bureaus of the state, through Georgia emergency relief projects, are building in the various communities facilities for recreational and social life which will be a definite factor in removing one of the fundamental causes of transiency, Mr. Fynn explained.

3 GEORGIANS DIE OF AUTO INJURIES

Dry Branch Kaolin Mine Foreman Instantly Killed Near Macon in Crash.

MACON, Ga., March 26.—(AP)—J. F. Cranford, 28, foreman of a kaolin mine near Dry Branch, Ga., was instantly killed about 1 o'clock this morning when his auto swerved from the pavement and crashed into a large oak tree beside the road. The accident happened eight miles from Macon on the Jeffersonville road.

Cranford apparently was driving alone, headed toward his home in Twiggs county, and Sheriff Sam Kitchens, of that county, said that apparently he fell asleep at the wheel, or else something went wrong with the steering gear.

The victim's neck was broken by the impact and flames enveloped the wreckage, but passing motorists rescued the lifeless body before it was burned.

Three Cities Plan To Honor Dr. Long

ATHENS, Ga., March 26.—(AP)—Three cities in this section—Danielsville, Jefferson and Athens—will pay special homage to the momory of Dr. Crawford W. Long, discoverer of ether anesthesia, on March 30, ninety-third anniversary of the discovery.

Danielsville was Dr. Long's birthplace, Jefferson the place where he first realized the pain-killing power of ether, and Athens where he attended the University of Georgia and spent the final months of his life.

National ether day is known at the university as Crawford W. Long day, and this year Dr. Max Cutler, nationally known cancer specialist of New York city, will speak here. He is also a graduate of the University of Georgia.

The exhilarating effects of ether were already known but it was Dr. Long, then a 27-year-old physician, who became aware it was also capable of rendering a person insensible to the pain of the surgeon's knife.

The discovery has been characterized by Dr. Frank K. Boland, of Atlanta, president of the Long Memorial Association, and a Georgia alumnus, as a "blessing for which no praise, no expression of gratitude can be too great."

George Folds, police captain, said the certificates represent six nights of attendance at the Augusta Drivers' school and passing a written examination.

Drivers who go six months more without an accident will be presented gold-plate badges. Those who drive an additional 12 months without an accident—18 months in all—will get small gold badges.

The certificates are signed by Mayor R. E. Allen Jr., Police Chief C. J. Hilson and Captain Folds.

Another school will be held shortly.

BIBB COUNTY TAX BILL VETOED BY GOVERNOR

Columbus Library Measure Also Voided by Executive. State Road Added.

A legislative bill to permit Bibb (Macon) county to levy a special tax of not more than one mill for the care and support of the sick poor of the county was vetoed Tuesday by Governor Talmadge.

Although the governor made no comment on his action, his veto is in line with his announced policy of opposing additional taxes for any purpose.

The measure would have allowed Bibb county to levy the one-mill tax in addition to taxes already authorized for paupers in the county. It was introduced by Representatives Bloodworth, Bowden and Freeman, of Bibb county.

Governor Talmadge also vetoed a bill which would have given Muscogee (Columbus) county authority to appropriate annually from educational funds money to support public libraries maintained by the city of Columbus.

Despite the veto, however, Muscogee county will be empowered to give money to public libraries, because a general bill to this effect, applying to all counties of the state, was signed by the governor last week.

The vetoed bill would have permitted Muscogee county to aid financially "public libraries maintained by cities in that county and to which citizens throughout the county have access."

A road extending from a point 10 miles north of Brunswick on State Highway 27 to Patterson in Pierce county Tuesday was added to the state aid highway system as Governor Talmadge signed a house bill to that effect.

The road, 37 miles long, extends through Brantley county. The measure was drawn by Representatives Brown, of Glynn; Jones, of Brantley, and Oden, of Pierce.

State Senator H. Dixon Smith, of Columbus, Tuesday said he believed Governor Talmadge will "take full charge" of state revenues and expenditures during the remainder of his term in office, by reason of failure of the assembly to pass the general appropriations bill.

Smith said he was not a lawyer, but ventured the opinion that the governor would assume virtual dictatorial powers over revenues and appropriations. The governor's term ends in January, 1937.

Baggerly, Macon, alternate delegate; F. R. Crouch, Dawson, sovereign delegate; H. C. Fabian, Atlanta, state manager and sovereign delegate; W. M. Campbell, Faceville, auditor; L. J. Sauley, Griffin, auditor; E. M. Beaton, Waycross, alternate delegate.

COLUMBUS, Ga., March 26.—(AP) Winding up its convention in a warm debate before adoption of a resolution urging immediate payment of the soldiers' bonus, the Georgia camp, Woodmen of the World, today elected Charles P. Hannah, of Dalton, as head consul.

Hannah succeeds E. D. Rivers, of Lakeland, retiring head consul and speaker of the state house of representatives.

Speaker Rivers took the floor to urge the Woodmen to pass the resolution to urge congress to adopt legislation for immediate payment of the veterans' compensation certificates. The debate began when the resolutions committee declined to recommend favorable action on the question.

The convention adjourned after election of officers.

Besides Mr. Hannah, other officers elected were:

George B. Hamilton, Atlanta, head adviser; Charles E. Baggett, of Dublin, head banker (re-elected); R. W. Gee, Albany, head clerk; J. C. McLeod, Valdosta, head escort; H. T. Sanders, Danielsville, head watchman; De Witt Fowler, Buford, head sentry.

Sovereign delegates chosen were: H. C. Fabian, Atlanta; F. R. Crouch, Dawson, and A. D. Finley, Hazlehurst. E. M. Beaton, Waycross; W. A. Keown, Rome, and E. Baggerly, Macon, were named alternates. Auditors were named as follows: George Gammage, Bronwood; W. M. Campbell, Faceville; J. E. Stewart, Fort Benning; Worlie Adams, Royston, and L. J. Sauley, Griffin.

Rivers, arguing for adoption of the bonus resolution, said that many Woodmen had participated in the World War and were within their rights in asking by resolution that the veterans of the war receive their adjusted compensation now.

The resolutions committee had advised against taking action on the question.

The question of whether the bonus matter was a political issue or not was injected into the debate, but on Speaker Rivers' plea that nothing was too good for the men who went to war, the delegates reversed the action they had taken previously in approving the resolution committee's stand.

The biennial ball, highlight on the entertainment program, was featured by work put on by two degree teams of the Woodman's Circle, sister organization, who came to Columbus from East Point and Atlanta. Maple Grove Circle, Atlanta, and Mary E. Larocca circle, East Point, made a beautiful showing and set off the big dance floor with intricate maneuvers.

Negro Is Convicted In Slaying of Carroll

DOUGLASVILLE, Ga., March 26. A jury in Douglas superior court today convicted a negro known as Eddie Bowen, 22, of firing the shots here on the night of February 19 that caused the death of Joe Carroll, of Carrollton, the next day in an Atlanta hospital. No recommendation was included in the guilty verdict and he will be sentenced Wednesday to die in the electric chair at the state farm.

Carroll was here waiting for a bus to Carrollton and accompanied the local night watchman on his rounds. They found the rear door of a grocery store tampered with and when the watchman went to the front of the store Carroll was shot while still near the rear door. He was rushed to an Atlanta hospital, where he died the next day.

Bowen, a local negro, several days later was arrested and charged with the shooting.

The trial was before Judge J. R. Hutcheson, with Solicitor Hal C. Hutchins representing the state.

TOBACCO GROWERS ARE BUSY AT VALDOSTA

VALDOSTA, Ga., March 26.—(AP) Enthusiastic over the outlook for their crop, tobacco growers here are busy this week transplanting from beds to fields.

Some of the growers have finished transplanting and report plants in good condition.

This year, says the Valdosta Times, there will be an increase of about 400 acres in area planted to tobacco "which means that more plants are necessary and there probably will be a much larger crop for sale when the market opens."

Blue mold has appeared in some sections of the county, but has not done sufficient damage to cause alarm, the Times said. Nearly all growers planted beds sufficiently large to allow for losses from the mold and from unfavorable weather conditions.

HUGE GAIN SEEN IN U. S. LENDING

$2,907,000,000 More Lent by Federal Government in 1934 Than 1933.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—(AP)—A compilation of figures from the principal lending agencies of the federal government disclosed today that it loaned $2,907,000,000 more in 1934 than it did in 1933.

This increase was emphasized by a report of the Federal Reserve System showing its member banks loaned $800,000,000 less in 1934 than the year before.

Another important factor in considering government lending figures was the low ebb to which capital security issues dropped during 1934. Only in recent weeks has the securities commission noted an appreciable break in capital market offerings, with Swift & Co., of Chicago, apparently starting the trend with a large refunding bond issue. New registration of issues for the month of March now approach $200,000,000.

It was into the long-term capital loan market that most of the federal money flowed as compared with the short-term loans which make up the greatest volume of commercial bank advances.

Non-Reserve Lending.

The Federal Reserve loan figures, however, did not reflect the lending of some 9,000 state banks which are not members of the Federal Reserve and which do not report their activities to Washington. Upwards of three-fourths of the nation's banks are members of the Federal Reserve, however, and officials regarded it likely that the operations of non-members followed a similar trend.

The four principal lending agencies of the federal government, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Public Works Administration, the Farm Credit Administration and the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, loaned $3,154,000,000 in 1933 and $6,161,000,000 in 1934.

Virtually every type of loan is covered by the four agencies. RFC has power to lend to banks, industry and various forms of credit organizations. The Home Owners' Loan Corporation lends principally to the distressed homeowner. The Farm Credit Administration makes widely differing kinds of farm mortgages on collateral ranging from farm lands to crops that are grown.

Loans to Municipalities.

Virtually all of the public works loans have been to municipalities or state subdivisions, the collateral being chiefly bonds issued by these agencies.

The last report of the treasury figured that a total of $7,479,000,000 of loans were outstanding. Their figures included several smaller agencies whose loans were not included in the "big four" group of lenders.

Reconstruction Corporation loans jumped about half a billion dollars over 1933; farm credit loans leaped upward by $1,100,000,000, and Home Loan Corporation lending climbed almost $2,000,000,000. Public works loans dropped about half a billion dollars, but the loans for this agency were hard to figure with any degree of accuracy.

Loans Outstanding.

The treasury figures that the Home Owners' Loan Corporation has the largest amount of loans outstanding, $2,500,000,000 as of January 31. The Home Loan banks, allied with HOLC, had another $82,000,000 outstanding.

The four principal divisions of the Farm Credit Administration stood as follows: Federal Land banks, $2,008,000,000 outstanding; federal intermediate credit banks, $152,000,000; Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation, $643,000,000; Banks for Co-operatives, $28,000,000.

Reconstruction Finance Corporation had outstanding $1,397,000,000 and Public Works Administration $266,000,000. The Shipping Board, War Emergency Corporation and agencies and the old War Finance Corporation helped to make up the remainder of the loans outstanding.

Alaska to Canada Deer Drive Told by Bahr, Expedition Head

Andrew Bahr, Laplander, who is called "the best reindeer man in the world" and who was sent to Alaska in 1898 to teach reindeer husbandry to the Eskimos, describes here his experiences in the unprecedented drive of rindeer from western Alaska to the Mackenzie river delta in northwestern Canada.

The drive, with Bahr in charge, began in 1929. At the start, the herd numbered 3,442. The reindeer had been bought by the Canadian government for delivery to the Canadian Eskimos, who were facing starvation. The successful completion of the long march across the arctic means food, hides, harness and clothing for the Canadian Eskimos and Indians living in the wilderness north of the arctic circle.

Bahr, whose plane is storm-bound in the Mackenzie river country, has been in communication with Max Miller, who went to Edmonton, Alberta, to meet him. Bahr's story is told here by Miller, the newspaper reporter who came suddenly into fame with the publication of "I Cover the Waterfront," a success which he has followed with other books, the latest being "The Man on the Barge."

As Told To MAX MILLER.

(Copyright, 1935, for The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

EDMONTON, Alta., March 26.—My boys and I may have been frostbitten and bruised, out on our feet and groggy, snow-blinded at times and starved, but the reindeer herd at last has just been delivered and that's the main thing, mister.

It's a long way from the west coast of Alaska to Canada, you know, and it's three times longer when you're trying to keep 3,000 reindeer together, and I would say that, for every deer in the herd, we traveled a mile, counting the many times the deer were stampeded by wolves and we had to back-track.

The time I mighty near had to give up was the time I mighty near died. It seemed all over, it did. I was in the middle of a flat ice country, a hundred miles across, that had no markings. The blizzard had hid the moon and it was as dark as if there were no moon, and my Eskimo boys and I had separated to find some of the deer if we could, but we couldn't, and we had been up on our feet for 60 hours straight with the temperature 50 or 60 below and blowing right through us.

Guide Gets Lost.

I had hired an Eskimo guide of the locality, but he was lost, too, he was, but he wouldn't say so.

"How much farther?" I asked him.

"Three hours," he said.

We were trying to find an island which had some provisions on it, and, after we tramped in the dark four more hours, I asked him again: "How much farther?"

"Three hours," he said.

I'm not a youngster no more, you know. I'm past 60, and when my face and wrists began to lose all feeling, and when my legs stopped moving through the snow the way they should, I said to myself: "Well, Andrew Bahr, it's all over, isn't it?"

I yelled through the wind to the guide: "How much farther?"

"Three hours," he said. This was all he knew and that three hours was stretched into 25 before finally we stumbled onto the place, meaning 25 hours added to the previous 60 when driving herd.

On the Christmas of 1929, when we started the drive to Canada from Elephant Point, Kotzebue sound—that's way on the other edge of Alaska, you know—the experts figured we either would get the 3,000 reindeer to Canada in two years or would not get them there at all. Well, she's been a good five years and some, mister. And of the original herd which started out, I can't say how many finished. Fawns were born each spring, and those which lived had more fawns, so I would say much of the 2,370 deer we delivered were not those we started out with.

A lot went to the wolves, a lot ran off with the wild caribou, and once in a blizzard, a lot of head got stranded on a big piece of ice which broke off and carried them out into the Arctic sea to be drowned, and there was a sad sight to see, let me tell you, but all of us were fighting for our own lives at the moment, so the best we could do was watch them go.

Whenever we could we avoided wild caribou country for, in their way, these caribou can deplete a herd quicker than wolves can. There was no telling when a herd of wild caribou might come out of nowhere at full speed smack into our own herd, get mixed up and take our reindeer off at a gallop with them. My Eskimo herders would then have to go out and try to get them back again, which meant a matter of many days.

Wolves Eat 200.

But in one of the worst winters of all, even the caribou for some reason cleared out. It was too tough a winter even for them at this spot and that time. The wolves had been living off the caribou somewhat, and now, with the caribou gone, the wolves closed in on our deer, and what a mess that was! They took from 150 to 200 animals that winter, I'd say. But it was the way they scared the deer which was the worst.

The wolves would wait until a blizzard was on before making an attack. They were not in large bands, but ran in bunches of from four to 12 mostly, and when the snow was so thick we couldn't see anything it was just then that they would close in. The herd would take fright and scatter, so that we would have to spend the next two or three days trying to round them up. Sometimes they would run 30 or 40 miles, and when we did find them they would be so exhausted we could not travel with them next day.

Once, in trying to round up a big herd that had broken away, we were gone so long that our food ran out and we lived for six days on one cup of flour and the hard dough broken from the sourdough pot. This was chipped from the pot and we each took nibbles.

But up close to the Arctic coast, when we began to think that everything which could happen to us had already happened to us, my two Eskimos asked to have their wives join them from Kotzebue sound. The men's clothes were all in shreds by then, and so were their muk-luks (Eskimo boots), and they needed the women along to make new outfits. We got the request through somehow by way of some trappers in northwest Canada, and the families were brought around in a little trading boat through the Arctic ocean.

After the wives had been with us a long time, a baby was born. It died later, and is now buried beneath the snow up there.

White Woman in Wilderness.

Tom Wood, one of the Eskimos, was lost for three days and was sure he was going to die. The temperature was 70 degrees below. When he could go no further he fell down into the snow and began to pray. That's what he did. And a long distance off he thought he saw a person in the storm. Tom's nose, chin, cheeks and wrists were frozen, and he could not talk. But he stumbled on toward the person, and there it was, a woman, and a white woman. She was standing in front of an igloo. She turned out to be a trapper's wife, who had just gone outside for a minute to study the storm, and that's why Tom feels so sure that God answered him.

He feels so sure about it that when we finally reached the Mackenzie river long afterwards, and a Canadian visitor asked Tom what he would like given to him from the outside, the only thing Tom asked for was four hymn books and two Bibles.

The request was forwarded on down to Edmonton and took a long time getting there, but the ministers did not know what kind of Bible Tom could read, so they finally decided to make sure by sending him one printed in English, one in Laplandish and a third in Eskimo English.

These two Eskimos, Peter and Tom Wood, were with me more than three of the five years. When the herd reached the west bank of the Mackenzie and help began to reach me from the other side, I thought the boys had had enough, so let them go home, one of the wives being seriously sick. A trading boat took them to Point Barrow.

Perspiration Freezes.

These boys admitted afterwards that never in their lives had they gone through anything like that before, and no wonder. On regular days the shifts at herding would be 24 hours long, and more often than not twice as long as that. To keep the deer together, they would have to ski fast around the herd, and the perspiration would freeze their clothes, making the clothes as hard as planks.

Two of my Eskimo crews were forced to quit because of the tough going. And once in the camp, when I was so sick I thought sure I would pass out before morning, I worried about what would happen to the herd, so told the boys to keep on with the herd to Canada, no matter what happened.

"These deer are for your own people who are starving over there," I told the boys. "The deer will save them the same as it saved your own brothers in Alaska." The boys knew that I spoke the truth, so promised to try to continue on no matter what happened to me before morning.

The final crossing of the Mackenzie delta this time was not as tough as when we had tried to cross it that time before, but it was tough enough, for, if a wind should have come up and cleared off the snow from the ice, the deer would all have been stranded out there, slipping all over themselves and breaking their legs and necks. It's about 100 miles across, you know.

But Dan Crowley, the American who came from the east side of the river to help me, staked out a route ahead of time across the ice so we could see where we were, and on to some of the frozen islands out there we packed in sacks of moss ahead of time for the deer to eat in case we were caught in the middle. As it was, we had to hurry the deer so fast that some of them dropped in their tracks, and had to be carted the rest of the way on our sleds.

It was dark all the time, you see, except for the moon which shone all through what would be your daytime here. And a month or so before, when we were about all set for the final dash, imagine how we felt when an unexpected blow not only cleared the ice of snow but the moon also right up and had a total eclipse on us. That's what it did.

southern water fishing expeditions in the last two years.

With relief funds exhausted by the end of the month, the president and Hopkins apparently expected final congressional action during the week on the $4,000,000,000 work bill and framed their plans accordingly.

Silent on Work Bill.

Hopkins talked little about the program pending completion of the bill, but it appeared likely an advisory committee of government officers would comprise the administrative set-up for the undertaking. Among the group are expected to be Rexford G. Tugwell, undersecretary of agriculture; Secretary Ickes, public works administrator; Robert Fechner, head of the Civilian Conservation Corps, and others.

He did say there was every expectation of providing jobs very early but withheld prediction of when the complete program to put 3,500,000 to work would be filled.

One principle of the undertaking, said Hopkins, is to seek to make jobs where the unemployed now reside. Direct relief, he assured, would be carried on until the new attempt at made work got under way.

Captain Wilson Brown, naval aide, and Dr. Ross T. McIntire, White House physician, accompanied the president aboard ship. McIntire has been up night and day at the White House during the crisis in the illness of Louis M. Howe, the president's secretary, whose rally permitted the fishing cruise.

As soon as Mr. Roosevelt boarded the ship, the presidential flag was hoisted to the mainmast. It was only a few minutes before the new ship was out in midstream, turning for the 20-mile cruise to the Atlantic.

Key To Take Stump To Urge State Repeal

Mayor Key, president of the Georgia Mayors' Association and nationally known repealist, will take the stump in Georgia in the interest of the state prohibition repeal referendum to be held May 15.

"I am going to speak in the interest of repeal as I believe it is a long step in the interest of temperance," Key asserted Tuesday as he announced he has accepted an invitation to speak at 12:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon (eastern standard time) to the Kiwanis Club at Cornelia.

"My subject will be repeal and the benefits we may expect if we handle the liquor situation in a sane and orderly way."

POPULAR VERDICT ON LIQUOR SOUGHT

over my veto. I'll not sign any checks calling for such payments.

"In this liquor store proposal I am only attempting to allow the city to regulate a hazardous business. I know what the saloon was. Many persons do not realize what their return will mean. Through the liquor store Atlanta can control the liquor situation, I believe, better than through any other means. That is what I want to do. I do not favor liquor drinking. I want temperance. The liquor store is only an effort to make the best of a bad situation."

Under the proposed ordinance, which was carried in full in Tuesday's issue of The Constitution, Key would be in charge of the stores. He would stock and operate the store or stores, would pay all expenses and would turn all proceeds into the city treasury. Provision was made for resale of intoxicants by hotels, clubs, hospitals, restaurants and the like through payment of $75 a quarter after a permit had been voted by council.

None was killed but the injuries of several were reported serious.

U. S. TO DISMISS APPEAL ON TEST OF NRA LEGALITY

al of the Belcher case from leading to wholesale disregard of NRA.

The case involved William E. Belcher, a Centerville, Ala., lumber mill operator, and centered around charges of violations of the lumber code's wage and hour provisions. An Alabama federal court ruling upheld Belcher and declared the NRA unconstitutional.

The president's letter, issued a few hours after he left for Florida on a fishing trip, said:

"I am particularly requesting the department of justice to give every assistance in maintaining compliance with the codes and in advising the district attorneys throughout the country to take prompt and vigorous action to prevent or to punish such violations."

Extension Necessity.

Replying to a communication from Richberg, recently chosen head of the NRA administrative board, Mr. Roosevelt also said that the violations Richberg spoke of should impress congress with the necessity of extending NRA soon.

Unless continued by congress, the recovery organization expires on June 16 and the current hearing before the senate finance committee on the agency has revealed strong opposition to its operations both in and out of congress.

"Let me also suggest," the president said, "that the National Industrial Recovery Board should bring the facts of this situation to the attention of the appropriation committees or the senate and the house of representatives so that they may understand the importance of accelerating action to extend the national industrial recovery act and to end a period of uncertainty as to the provisions and the extension of the law which has a retarding effect upon industrial recovery and tends to unsettle commercial and labor relations."

NRA Complaint Probe.

Before the finance committee, meanwhile, the senate's first attempt to investigate a specific complaint against NRA showed that if a thorough inquiry were undertaken it would extend far beyond June 16.

The committee today completed hearing only one side of the charges involving a single code after three days of sessions. Hundreds of similar complaints have been filed with the committee against many of the more than 700 existing codes.

The case completed today was presented by Francis M. Curlee, of St. Louis, on behalf of a minority of the men's clothing manufacturers, who contend the code authority regulating their industry is dominated and controlled by a majority whose interests conflict with theirs.

Curlee complained that NRA was a "bureaucracy" with its "bureaucratic finger in every pie."

"There can't be a thing done in industry without coming to Washington to get permission," he protested.

Lumber Code Opinion.

Bearing out the assertion that the lumber code was "weak," the Justice Department statement said the lumber code "contains administrative provisions peculiar to itself with respect to the extension of discretionary powers to non-governmental agencies—a fact which was emphasized many times in the recent senate committee hearing and which set this code in a class by itself."

"Other cases in which these objections do not exist are being pressed in several of the circuits in order that decision of the appellate court may be secured as soon as possible," the statement said, indicating that a test of the law's constitutionality was still in mind.

But it was pointed out that there is virtually no likelihood that any of these cases can reach the court in time for a decision at this term of court. Meanwhile, the existing law will have been revised or allowed to lapse entirely.

Author of Decision.

There seemed little doubt that the decision to drop the Belcher case had been taken up with Mr. Roosevelt before he left for Florida. The official who first suggested that the issue be sidestepped was not revealed. Some minor officials at NRA indicated the decision might have been Cummings'. There have been many unconfirmed reports that high Department of Justice officials have not co-operated with NRA.

Some observers outside the administration, however, said they felt that friends of the recovery agency proposed that the case be dismissed. They suggested that if a revised NRA could establish a firm background of worth to industry, labor and the public, courts would recognize this fact in future decisions.

In specific relation to the Belcher case, both Cummings and Reed also noted the lower Alabama court had made no finding of fact and they indicated it would be wise "that fundamental questions involved in the national industrial recovery act be presented to the supreme court in a case in which full evidence of the facts have been given."

Although the prospects for quick action were dim there are many of these cases now approaching the supreme court. The legal section of NRA said today that 770 cases are pending in the federal court while 510 have been closed, a total of 1,280 in less than two years.

There was little comment in congress upon the decision to drop the Belcher case.

France Drops Probe Of Munitions Makers

PARIS, March 26.—(AP)—A vote of confidence was given Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin in the chamber of deputies tonight on his demand that discussion of an inquiry into the munitions traffic be dropped "lest the national defense of France be dragged out into the open at this time."

An earlier vote which involved no question of confidence had gone overwhelmingly against the premier, reflecting the chambers' resentment at the tongue-lashing Flandin gave it yesterday, and the feeling almost resulted in fisticuffs between the premier and Deputy Louis Guillon.

In urging that the munitions inquiry projects be dropped, Flandin said: "I will not accept that the exportation of materials to the armies of our friends and allies be publicly discussed."

The motion of confidence was then put and the deputies voted, 374 to 210, against giving the motion place on Thursday's calendar, thus indefinitely postponing it.

Youth Slays Friend Rehearsing for Play

GREENEVILLE, Tenn., March 26.—(AP)—Practicing for a school play, which called for the use of a pistol with blank cartridges, proved fatal today for Frank Swatzel, 17.

Swatzel and his close friend and classmate, Bill Roberts, 18, were practicing for the play at the school building yesterday. Sheriff Bruce Williams said the pistol, believed to have been empty, was fired by Roberts. Swatzel died today.

"Both boys said the shooting was accidental," Sheriff Williams said.

MUCK FIRE SMOKE GROUNDS HUGE CLIPPER

MIAMI, Fla., March 26.—(AP)—Delayed today by a blanket of Everglades smoke and the faulty pitch of a propeller, the Pan-American clipper, Great Flying Boat, will take off again tomorrow for San Diego, Cal.

There it will shortly tackle the job for which it was designed, "breaking in" a commercial air route over the Pacific ocean to China.

Captain Edwin Musick ordered a second start at daybreak, or as soon thereafter as conditions permit.

Boy, 13, Is Prepared For Truesdale's Knife

SAN JOSE, Cal., March 26.—(AP)—Grateful to his schoolmates and a citizens' committee, who raised an expense fund, Jimmy Neilson, 13, was ready to leave by train tonight for Fall River, Mass., to undergo an operation to correct his "upside down" stomach.

Dr. P. M. Truesdale, who performed a similar operation recently on Alyce Jane McHenry, 10-year-old Omaha girl, has offered to contribute the same service gratis to the San Jose lad. The fund, expected to total about $1,000, will pay traveling and living expenses of Jimmy and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Neilson.

The surgeon learned of Jimmy's case when the boy wrote to Alyce after reading accounts of her unusual operation for diaphramatic hernia.

ATLANTA, GA., MARCH 27, 1935.

MUST KEEP STEP WITH TIMES

In a recent comment on the rapidity with which the great railroad systems of the west are installing high-speed, streamlined trains, The Constitution pointed out that if the roads of the south are to reclaim their lost patronage they must also modernize their equipment and speed up their schedules.

It was cited that it now takes 22 hours to make the rail trip from New York to Atlanta, and if the traveler wished to continue on to Miami it would require almost two full days and nights—a distance that can be traveled by air between breakfast and dinner. It has been called to the attention of The Constitution that the special winter trains following the coast line route from New York to Miami make the trip in from 27 to 32 hours, and that these schedules are from an hour and a half to two hours faster than a year ago.

The improvement of the service on these trains manifests a realization by the railroads that new competition must be met by the railroads by increased speed and comfort in rail transportation—but the advances made are not sufficient to regain the patronage already lost, nor to prevent further losses.

More and more travelers will take to the air so long as they can journey to their destinations in safe and comfortable airships in one-third of the time necessary by rail.

One western railroad has announced the installation next month of a new high-speed, streamlined train that will reduce the time between Chicago and Portland from 60 to 39 hours, and other great railroad systems of the west now have similar trains under construction, or in operation.

The recent annual report of President Crawford, of the Pullman company, points out that "the engineering, manufacturing and operating staffs are working intensively on plans for new types of Pullman sleeping and parlor cars for use in high-speed trains for overnight and "transcontinental services." He adds that "at least three complete trains of that kind, including 11 Pullman-owned sleeping cars, will go into operation during 1935."

Apparently none of this new and up-to-date equipment is for the south. It will bring the Pacific closer to the Atlantic by rail, but there seems to be no disposition on the part of the systems east of the Mississippi to bring the north and east closer to the south.

A quarter of a century ago a fast mail train was operated between New York and Atlanta in 21 hours and 53 minutes. Now the fastest train requires 20 hours and 50 minutes, a saving of only one hour, despite the fact that the former train traveled over a single track with heavy grades, while the route is now double-tracked, with no grade exceeding one and a half degrees.

This rate of improvement is far from sufficient if the railroads are to successfully meet competition, from both the highway and the air.

The famous Nancy Hanks train was then being operated between Atlanta and Savannah on a six-hour schedule. Now the fastest train takes several hours longer, despite the fact that the roadbed has been greatly improved.

Speed is now the dominating factor in transportation.

As the result of their loss of business, the financial affairs of the railroads the country over are at the lowest ebb in their history—but if the systems of the west can finance the installation of modern, high-speed equipment, those of the south should be able to do so.

Stage-struck relatives of the famous haven't been pulling the crowds. It seems the public is more interested in the golden eggs than the goose.

Berlin reports have the reich prepared to put 1,000,000 men in the field. The peace to end peace is being pressed to a smashing climax.

A WISE SAFEGUARD

The suggestion that the United States safeguard its neutrality in the event of war in Europe by rigidly restricting passports to the affected areas is a wise plan that would go far toward eliminating a source of dangerous friction.

The loss of American lives in the sinking of the Lusitania was one of the major underlying causes of the entry of the United States into the World War. Previously the people of this country were, to a large extent, neutral in their attitude, and in almost unanimous sympathy with President Wilson's policy of "watchful waiting."

Overnight the temper of the American people was changed by the tragic loss of life when the great liner was torpedoed and carried down with it many notable figures in the business and cultural life of this country. Antagonism to Germany was crystallized and the foundation was laid for the war spirit that later swept the country and culminated in our entering the conflict on the side of the allies.

Citizens of neutral countries should keep out of sections where a major war is in progress. It is not contemplated that those having sound reasons to visit such areas should be prevented from doing so, but the tightening down in the issuance of passports would keep travelers actuated by no better motive than curiosity from subjecting themselves to dangers out of which might come complications involving the peace of the nation.

The decision of the state department not to send to Berlin the contemplated note of protest over Hitler's rearmament order, and the various suggestions being advanced as safeguards against our being involved should war again break out on the continent, are reassuring evidence of the determination of the national government to remain hands off in the troubles of Europe. It is the only sane and safe course for America to pursue.

CONSTRUCTIVE FARM AID

An interesting plan by which many of the millions of dollars sent out of the state each year for food raised elsewhere may be kept at home, is contained in an address delivered by Charles J. Haden, chairman of the Farm Debt Adjustment Commission for Georgia.

Mr. Haden points out to those who live in the cities and smaller communities of the state that "when you pay for a pig in Iowa and its transportation by way of Chicago to Georgia, pay the packing house profits, the local store profits, and the federal process tax, the meat has cost about 20 cents a pound."

The wiser course, he tells the urban dwellers of the state, would be to "furnish the pig to your neighbor farmer and the feed to fatten it, and share with the farmer equitably the meat when cured in local cold storage, the result being that it will cost you about one-half what you have been paying for it in dribbles, and at the same time you will have kept millions of dollars in Georgia and given employment to thousands of men."

This far-visioned Georgian, who has long been intimatcly familiar with the problems of the rural sections of the state, takes the position that if the local towns will provide canning plants, cold storage warehouses and in other ways make it possible for the farmer to profitably raise more food, "there will be no more need for us to buy from the northwest."

Such co-operation would benefit the town dweller equally with the farmer. City people would have fresher and better vegetables and meat and would pay less for them. They would benefit further by the increasing purchasing power of the farmer, who invariably spends most of his money in the nearest town.

Georgia is fast awakening to the necessity of closer co-operation between the city man and his rural neighbor, and in this realization lies the greatest hope that the state will be able to keep at home the huge sums now being sent to other sections each year for products that can be produced here as cheaply and in as good quality.

A thousand square feet of dance floor was stolen out of a Los Angeles beer garden. It is a thing a cold sober dancer is likely to resent.

The postal authorities decree that limburger cheese may be mailed. Why not—if it can be hurled over the radio.

THE WORLD'S WINDOW

By PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.

Rival Preparations.

Ever since September Italy has been pouring troops and equipment through the Red sea to Erythrea and Somililand. In November, last year, the king of Italy, His Majesty Victorio Emanuele, visited the colonies and the occasion was made an affair of such pomp and circumstance that every close observer of the near eastern scene knew at once that the visit had a special significance, namely, to impress the Abyssinians with Italy's might. When you hear the radio announce, as I did the other day, that Italy has gathered a few divisions in her Sicilian depots, but has not dispatched a single unit yet to the east, it is to laugh. British officers in the Sudan figure that Italy has sent 50,000 men, 250 tanks and assault cars and 125 bombing planes out there since last fall.

The British figures are correct. Then there has been an unusual activity in Erythrea and in Italian Somaliland in building barracks and hospitals. I know full well that the world is half believing that Italy is the wronged patty in this dispute, but if you take the trouble to investigate what has preceded the present dispute, you might change opinion. And if you look at the map and see a place called Ualа-Ualа, you will notice that it lies about 100 kilometers inside the Abyssinian frontier. And that is the place where Italian troops were attacked by Abyssinians.

So what? The answer is Abyssinia has already been invaded.

Cautious Duce.

For years it has been known that Italy intended to turn Abyssinia into a protectorate. That is not just something that has come up in the last few weeks. In 1886 the Italians began their pressure against the Ethiopian empire. Sometimes this pressure was relaxed, when other more important things required undivided attention, for instance the great war. But no sooner was the war over than pressure against Abyssinia was renewed. Yet a war declaration there has not come for a long time, not since 1895 to be exact.

Mussolini does not want to appear as the aggressor. Nevertheless, if you look at the situation objectively and impartially and don't let yourself be guided by official statements, which are obviously designed to throw you off the right track, if you do that you will soon understand that Italy is trying to maneuver Abyssinia into striking the first blow. If that happens Italy will come out as the innocent party and may gain the moral support of other powers in the conquest of Abyssinia, on the condition that others also get a share in the exploitation of the Abyssinian market, which is the whole object of the present trouble.

Complications.

If it should come to a war between Italy and Abyssinia, don't be deluded in thinking that such a war can be localized to Africa. There are too many rivals involved in the scheme. The Swedes are building munition factories in Abyssinia. The French and Belgians operate the only railway in the country. The Japanese have vast concessions in the country to grow cotton and to modernize the industry. Last year 80 per cent of Abyssinia's trade was in Japanese hands. France has just ceded 20 per cent of her interests in the Abyssinian railway to Italy.

The Negus could do nothing against this. But he refuses to grant the Italians a share in the operation of the railway, because he fears, not without reason, that such a move would be the prelude to a more permanent Italian footing in his country. The British, too, are deeply interested in Abyssinia. Or do you think perhaps that the British find it pleasant that Japan has installed herself on the Red sea, on that thin line of communication between England and her huge possessions in the east. Watch out for complications if it comes to a war between Italy and Abyssinia.

Health Talks

BY DR. WILLIAM BRADY

THE COSMETIC GROTESQUERY.

In the name of the father, the son, the brother and most especially the husband, if any, of every girl in North America, I utter this squawk. It is high time somebody called for three jeers for an intolerable situation, and I hope a few of the suckers will say an audible amen.

Here in the lying-in room where I give birth to the crazy notions that keep this column in hot water, dutch and the best papers in the country, naturally I keep a space a yard wide and two or three yards long cleared where, whenever anything bothers me, I can roll a half dozen somersaults and brush it off. I am quite serious about this; unlike some doctors, I use my own medicine. But once a year comes an occasion when the good old rolls fail to give any relief and I just stomp up and down the rink gritting my teeth, groaning and muttering imprecations. This is when the maddening news comes telling what the nation's bill for cosmetics was last year.

Now for goodness sake don't infer that I'm an old meanie. Nothing like that, mama—er, I should say, I like my women prim, plump and pulchritudinous and I don't go for frumps or frights in any case. The woman who does not avail herself of cosmetic art when art would enhance her beauty belongs in the category of the man who neglects to shave and brush the dandruff off his shoulder.

But good gracious, girls, have a heart. If you have no heart, then try to have some brains anyway. In this day of depression, privation and misery, how can any woman with a heart squander money on humbug cosmetics and keep a good conscience? These pernicious nostrums are promoted at tremendous expense, and even if the poor working girls chip in a considerable share of their scant wages to pay for it all, it is a sad thing to see college bred women emulating the shopgirls and gum-chewing stenographers—for all of which poor father has to pay, no matter what grade or class his women folk belong to. I say every woman should use such artifice as may be necessary to make her look as attractive as possible, but at the same time she ought to have brains enough to remain unimpressed by all the beauty bunk.

It might seem none of my business what my neighbor's wife or daughter squanders on her make-up, but it is assuredly my right and my duty to protest against this extravagance, since such unlovely snobbery helps to boost the price of honest, essential cosmetics which my own wife or daughter must buy in order to keep up with the Joneses.

Men of America, suckers, you pay the bill. Why not look into the cosmetic racket a bit? Read "100,000,000 Guineapigs" (in any library). Get the facts about cosmetics from Consumers' Research, Washington, N. J.

For information concerning a particular cosmetic nostrum query the Bureau of Investigation, American Medical Association, 535 N. Dearborn street, Chicago, Ill.

News Behind the News

By Paul Mallon

WASHINGTON, March 26.—From Augsburg to Richberg is not very far. The labor peace of Richberg is essentially the same from an inner viewpoint as the religious peace of Augsburg.

In the Augsburg peace (A. D., 1555), two religious factions agreed to cease religious warfare and to recognize the supremacy of the German state.

In the Richberg peace (March 14, 1935), labor and the New Dealers agreed to stop fighting each other, and to recognize the supremacy of the NRA state. In both cases it was more of an armed truce than a real peace, and no one knows how long this one will last.

INSTIGATOR Very little publicity attended the Richberg event, because no one was extra proud of it. The deal was made by the New Deal merely for the purpose of getting its mild NRA reorganization bill through congress.

The man who fixed it was not Richberg, but Averill Harriman, the invisible manager of the existing NRA organization. He went to President Roosevelt and submitted the basic plan which caused Messrs. Richberg, Green (A. F. of L.), Lewis (United Mine Workers) and Hillman (NRA) to be called into the White House.

Harriman's part is being kept quiet for fear of disturbing the truce. Labor does not like him and might withdraw if it suspected his part.

TRADE It was as clever a bargain as ever has been made by five poker players.

The hardest man to sell was Lewis. He likes Richberg even less than General Johnson likes Huey Long. In preliminary conferences, he flatly asserted he would have nothing to do with NRA as long as Richberg was connected with it. Yet under the truce-peace, Richberg is to be chairman of NRA, and Lewis overjoyed.

There are two reasons why Mr. Lewis now will concede that perhaps Richberg has a kind face. The main one is that Lewis' right-hand man (Phillip Murray) was put on the NRA board of administration. This appointment was, of course, made publicly.

What was not made public was the fact that Mr. Lewis also got an understanding that Mr. Richberg will relinquish the NRA chairmanship June 16 and have nothing to do with NRA thereafter.

So all it really amounts to personally is that Mr. Lewis has agreed for a consideration to stop hating Mr. Richberg until noon, June 16.

SAVED! What it amounts to politically is that Mr. Roosevelt's NRA reorganization plan is rescued from the brink of the congressional Niagara.

At least the Borah-Nye opposition group suffered a major loss of strength when the Green-Lewis A. F. of L. gang walked out on them. The truce is supposed to include a specific understanding that Green and Lewis will co-operate in getting the administration bill through the senate. The radical NRA reorganization bill (30-hour week, etc.) is to be dropped by Mr. Green.

What Mr. Green gets for being so kind is supposed to be the Wagner labor board bill. There seems to be some disagreement about how definite the White House promise was about that, but the labor groups are now saying privately that Mr. Roosevelt will either come out openly for the bill or attempt to jockey it through the senate before adjournment.

Regardless of that, Mr. Green also will get some representatives on code authorities which were hitherto made up only of industrialists.

PRESTIGE All this criticism you have heard and will hear of Richberg has not hurt his standing inside the White House. His job is to take criticism from all quarters which might otherwise be directed at a higher source. Therefore, in a way, the more he is criticized, the more he fulfills his real mission. Today his standing is as solid as ever.

WARNING Caution should be exercised by businessmen and speculators in interpreting current activities in congress.

The Thomas silver amendment to the relief bill was adopted by the senate merely to save time. It will be dropped in the first handy waste basket by the conferees and will not prevail in the end. Neither will the inflationary aspects of the house bonus bill, or, in fact, any pending inflation proposals.

Similar false moves will be made from time to time until adjournment. No decisive action is in the wind now, beyond what you have already heard about.

NOTES The published threats of a coal strike are not taken seriously by those who know. Incidentally, in the Richberg truce, the New Dealers made no commitments on a new coal wage contract to replace the one expiring April 1, or on the Guffey bill.

NRA sentiment in senate progressive ranks began to change about the time of the truce. Progressive senators report that their mail is turning in favor of NRA.

Certain personal animosities were left behind by the senate relief bill vote. Senators La Follette and Wagner have definitely fallen out with Senator McCarran.

The greatest tribute which ever will be paid Senator Glass was the fact that the New Dealers let him handle their relief bill. He was against the bill and voted against it, but they have no complaints over his handling of it for them.

You Can't Change a Sheep Into a Wolf, But You Can Knock Out the Wolf's Teeth

By Robert Quillen

An economic scheme is unfair only when it is unnatural.

Pick up fifty men at random and turn them loose in a primitive land as raw and rich as America was in the 16th century, where each must survive by his own exertions, unhelped and unhindered, and no two of them will prosper in the same degree.

The strong, intelligent and industrious will thrive and the weak and unfit will perish.

That may be unfair, but it is the same natural fairness that makes one animal a rabbit and another a fox.

Return these 50 men to a civilized land and they will no longer produce the finished products they consume. They will exchange their labor for the products of other men, which means that each will render some service to society and receive a certain reward.

There is an economic law which, if allowed free play, will give to each man the reward he is able to deserve. And as each man chooses what service he shall render, he also determines in some measure the size of his reward.

If he chooses to manufacture handmade mouse traps, he cannot make $50 a day. The world simply will not pay that much for the number of traps he can make. They aren't worth it.

If he spends all the year producing five bales of cotton, he cannot make $5,000. His product isn't worth that much to the world.

His reward is not unfair, for the world gives him what his service is worth. If he desires a greater reward, let him learn to render a service that is worth more.

The just complaint of poor men is not that they earn too little, but that an unfair system denies them what they earn.

While men grow rich without rendering any service at all, it is obvious that they are living by the sweat of another man's brow. Discover the sum pocketed annually by those who render no commensurate service and you have the amount in which the worker is cheated of his earnings.

That is the unfairness of our system.

Any effort to help the poor by giving them $10 for $3 worth of service must fail, for it is contrary to natural law.

But it is possible to guarantee every man the reward he earns. It requires no more than the suppression of those who now exploit him and reap where they have not sown.

Citizens' Committee Denied Expense Cash

Payment of $2,500 to members of a special citizens' committee appointed to investigate county affairs by the March-April grand jury in 1933 was denied in an order issued Tuesday by Judge J. H. Hawkins, of Marietta. The sum was sought by the five members of the committee to pay expenses incurred in its investigation.

Judge Virlyn B. Moore, of Fulton superior court, previously ordered payment of the sum asked, for the purpose of testing the legality of the demand and when the county, through Ralph Pharr, acting county attorney, sought to enjoin payment, Judge Moore referred the matter to Judge Hawkins.

The committee was composed of C. F. Palmer, R. P. McLarty, C. C. Whitaker, Beverly DuBose and J. J. Jones.

WOMAN CHARGED WITH USING AUTO WITHOUT CONSENT

Mrs. Mae Boller, who jumped from an automobile Monday of last week a few seconds before it was demolished by a locomotive on the Seaboard tracks near Chattahoochee avenue, was bound over to Fulton criminal court Tuesday by Judge Luther Z. Rosser, in municipal court, on a charge of operating an automobile without the owner's consent. Bond was fixed at $50.

C. D. Redfern, owner of the car, refused last week to make a charge against Mrs. Boller, who admitted she drove away with his car while he went into a sandwich shop, but later changed his mind and took out the municipal court warrant.

Sturdivant's 'Piercing Eyes' 'Caught' by Gonzalez's Pen

CHIEF STURDIVANT—"Made the boys with wry mouths doubt the benefits of crime. . . . To him belongs the knowledge of the job he fills. . . When there's no constabulary duty to perform—his hobby an alley cat . . . and and he won't sell" . . . writes Gonzalez.

By MORO GONZALEZ,
Noted Mexican Caricaturist.

Here's the face that sent malefactors scooting. . . .

This stern visage of T. Sturdivant has walked into the dens of incorrigibles—made boys with wry mouths doubt the benefits of crime! . . .

Policeman, detective, and now chief. . . . Here a man whose only specialty is policing. . . . To him belongs the knowledge of the job he fills. . . . He's dynamite to gangsters. . . . Today Atlanta and vicinity are as treacherous quicksands for transgressors. . . .

A pair of piercing eyes has Sturdivant. . . . In his face a dogged tenacity written in unmistakable character. . . . I draw a large nose . . . and in bantering mood recall what's heard hereabouts. . . . Sturdivant is first to know the scent—first to catch whisperings that foul things are abroad. . . . Right now!—he springs to action to hunt the vicious down. . . .

As I draw him I think of fearlessness. . . . He of the serious mein gives that impression . . . and somehow personifies a power that spells enforcement . . . and respect for law. . . . Fine luck! . . . Not once your sketcher in a calaboose . . . and here's hoping not today. . . .

A guy what ain't scared of anything ain't scared of what's done on paper. . . . "Shoot the works—and don't spare the pencils!" says the chief. . . . I hear tell he can keep his job for life. . . . They picked a good one. . . .

Plain cops will tell you he's utterly sincere about the business of the police department. . . . That—his consuming purpose. . . . Sturdivant owns one of the keenest detective minds that have ever deciphered the intricate designs of crime—or handled the problems of the department. . . .

His secretary says: "He'd rather stay out all night hunting a robber than anything else. . . . Except maybe to fish and hunt." . . .

The corner policeman, picked at random, proclaims: "Sturdivant has caught more murderers and big criminals than any other chief in 25 years." . . . He seems to have prepared all his life to be chief . . . and he's it!

Looking for the ever-present weakness in humanity I dig around . . . and discover it! . . . In these moments when Sturdivant has no constabulary duties to perform he has a hobby. . . . It's an alley cat! . . . and she has just begotten a swell set of quadruplets. . . . He won't sell them . . . not even if you infer a doubtful pedigree or a shameless origin. . . . Stout fella!

He's custodian of the public peace—nemesis of the iniquitous lads with gats. . . . The Sturdivant face—safe through a hundred perils—is here laid low for a laugh. . . . But one's crayon would be false if power and courage, too, were not depicted there! . . .

Two Men Paralyzed, Allegedly by Whiskey

Two men were in Grady hospital Monday night, one in critical condition, as the result of drinking a certain brand of allegedly government stamped whisky.

C. T. Osborne, 48, of 1073 Mecaslin street, became paralyzed after taking three small drinks of whisky and physicians at the hospital say his condition is serious. They testified Osborne was not drunk when he was admitted.

The other patient is Tom Rayner, 40, of Alpharetta, who suffered virtually the same type of paralysis after a few drinks. His condition was less serious, it was said.

HOLLYWOOD IN PERSON

By MOLLIE MERRICK

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., March 26.—Mrs. Borden Harriman, socialite and handsome brain-truster of political fame, wasn't bested by Mrs. Patrick Campbell at all. The report of the encounter was quite erroneous.

Mrs. Campbell, it seems, tried out the old technique on the astute Mrs. Harriman. "Let's see, my dear, just who are you?" she said with the magnificent Campbell vagueness.

"I haven't the slightest notion of telling you again," said Mrs. Harriman with her neatest smile. "I've been telling you on and off for the last 20 years, Mrs. Campbell, and I think it's high time you made up your mind, or gave up completely."

One of our leading shops now advertises "a pet for every purse." . . . And one of our smallest eateries leads with "eat food fit for stars." . . . Leopold Stokowski and Rouben Mamoulian, who once produced an "opry" together, are conferring with eyes turned to the screen.

A GLOWING TIME WAS HAD.

One of the funniest stories heard in Hollywood in a long time concerns a lady high in political matters from one of the Dakotas and a prominent actress who has become famous in nit-wit roles. The actress invited the lady to dine. During dinner the actress said confidingly, "my hands are just itching to get at your hair." The lady was flattered indeed and all aglow that one so famous should descend to consideration of readjustment of her coiffure. The actress herself was very much aglow, too, but for a different reason.

After dinner the actress got at the lady's head—but with tremendous shears. The lady saw her coming just in time to do a Nijinsky over some small footstools and incidental tables in the elaborate and cluttered drawing room, and then she scooted right out the front door.

In the morning came a telephone call from the actress. "I'm so sorry," she said. "Won't you dine with me again, very, very soon?" The lady said she would—but didn't name the day.

The Rathbones held a christening party for their new dog family. The West Highland white terriers were called Bunty and Callum Muir, the springer spaniel was dubbed Happy and the little red cocker rejoices in the name Red until further consideration. . . . Joan Crawford is making a picture in correct sequence. For the benefit of those unacquainted with movie tactics, this is a terrific departure. Last sequences of a picture are often filmed first, and so on. The prospects of television competition are considered by some as the reason the movies are building up an emotional structure nowadays.

Head-of-the-class to George Arliss for his "Richelieu" and to Violet Kemble Cooper for her magnificent performance as the queen mother. . . . Young Robert Taylor is the most promising find of years in pictures, in my opinion. He came from radio.

THEY KEEP ON BOTHERING MAE.

The gorgeous Mae West seems to be bothered more than any other film star by people asking permission to use her name in advertising. A sailor on the Vanderbilt yacht Rainbow asked permission to name a certain sail the "Mae West jib." Race horse owners have asked permission to name their steeds after mae. She once had a request from Canada for the use of her name on a singing act to be called "The Mae West Rangers." And she has been asked to sponsor hamburger stands, hats, toys, dresses, corsets, lingerie and ice cream cones.

A young aviator even suggested that he call his plane, in which he proposed to circle the globe, the "Mae West"—provided she would help finance the trip.

To these requests Mae has the studio lawyer answer with a courteous but firm "no."

Carl Brisson postcards from Honolulu. . . . Marlene Dietrich is vacationing in New York. . . . Joan Bennett is back from Palm Springs with a brand-new sun-tan. . . . And the rest of us stay in Hollywood and grumble about the grey weather that spoils week-ends at the beach.

Render Terrell Backs Ad Valorem Tax Cut

Representative J. Render Terrell Jr., of Troup county, announced Tuesday that he would give his unqualified support to the constitutional amendment limiting the ad valorem tax to 15 mills.

"At the outset of the recent session of the general assembly I introduced a measure to limit the county taxation to 10 mills and the municipal taxation to the same figure," Representative Terrell said. "The overall limit of 15 mills suits me even better and I plan to devote all the time possible to put the limitation over in the 1936 general election."

The 15-mill limitation is being prepared for Governor Talmadge's signature. His approval is generally expected.

MOSQUE PURCHASE IN COUNCIL MONDAY

New 25-Year Plan, Entailing No Expenditures, Being Prepared.

Amortization of the $725,000 purchase price for the Shrine mosque and Fox theater properties over a 25-year period under a special fund plan, which will not call for the expenditure of a cent by the municipal government, will be presented Monday to city council, it was announced Tuesday by Councilman John A. White, chairman of council's public buildings committee.

White said bondholders have agreed at his request to a five-year extension of the 20-year period at first considered, that all fees for recordings, for issuing bonds and other incidentals will be borne by sellers, and that Atlanta will not "even have to buy a stamp."

City Attorney Jack C. Savage asserted Tuesday he is ready to approve a contract under the plan, and believes it the most feasible one suggested. He considers that it will withstand court attacks, and other attorneys interested are convinced the program can not be attacked successfully.

Attorneys representing the bondholders for the properties will have a detailed contract ready for Savage's approval by the latter part of the week.

Under the program, Atlanta will pay interest and sinking fund from proceeds of the properties. The city will put up no money, will agree to put none up and will not pledge the moral obligation of the city to pay any more than the properties bring.

"I am convinced Atlanta never had such a proposition made to it before," White said. "We cannot afford to quibble about this. We should accept it at once."

Savage announced the voting on acceptance of the contract Monday will be a general council vote.

Mr. Pottsmith is on a six month's tour of the principal cities of the south and reports from other southern cities are enthusiastic in their praise of his artistry.

The violin used by Mr. Pottsmith is an exact copy of a Stradivarius and was presented to him in 1911 in appreciation of his fine work. He studied under Professor Joseph Karg, German violinist.

Draw Your Own Conclusion From Accident Wave Peril

Are you wise?

Can you draw a logical conclusion from circumstances, or do you have to be slapped in the face with facts before you see the point?

Every person who reads the newspapers gets a daily reminder of the danger of the ever-growing accident wave. Headlines scream of it.

Are you adequately insured against this deadly peril?

Many who are not protected will say that the cost of protection is too high—and there's where The Constitution's offer to its readers between the ages of 15 and 69 of the famous $10,000 travel accident policy comes in.

We all know of the terrible toll taken by train wrecks, accidents to public carriers of all kinds; crashes of automobiles; reckless drivers who crush pedestrians under their wheels; burning buildings, etc.

We know that no man or woman can foretell disaster. Your time may come today or tomorrow or a month from now.

Can you afford to ignore this chance at protection, at security for yourself and family?

Quite a few of The Constitution's subscribers have heeded the warning and have protected themselves through The Constitution's insurance department.

Henry Miller, of a Parkway drive address on January 18, was injured in an automobile accident on Courtland street, from which he was totally disabled for 23 days, and on March 25 he was paid by the North American Accident Insurance Company $32.86.

James E. Hunt, of a Central avenue address, on February 21, while crossing the street was struck by a truck, from which accident he was totally disabled for three weeks and was paid by the North American Accident Insurance Company $30 on March 19.

James A. Campbell Jr., L. & N. Terminal building, on December 23, at Darien, Ga., had an automobile accident, from which he was totally disabled for a little over six weeks, and on March 11 was paid by the North American Accident Insurance Company $61.43.

The insurance offered you through The Atlanta Constitution is issued by the North American Accident Insurance Company of Chicago, Ill., which company has already paid Atlanta Constitution subscribers over $200,000. The insurance is offered to subscribers of the daily and Sunday Constitution and immediate dependent members of the subscriber's family between the ages of 15 and 69 on the one subscription going into the home at a small registration fee of 20c with application and 10c per month thereafter in addition to the subscription price, or $1 each per policy per year in advance to subscribers who live in Atlanta and Atlanta suburbs where we have carrier delivery. Out-of-town subscribers can have this insurance by paying $1 per policy per year in advance.

This insurance offered through The Atlanta Constitution provides for the payment of sums ranging downward from $10,000 for travel, $1,000 for auto and pedestrian deaths resulting from certain specified accidents, heavy sums for permanent injuries, and $10 weekly indemnity for total disability resulting from accidents set forth in the policy, which is at the rate of $43.33 per month.

In sending application for insurance, the applicant must state name in full, give age and occupation, and if beneficiary is desired the full Christian name of beneficiary must be given and relationship of same to the insured.

Do your duty! Protect yourself and family today. Tomorrow may be too late!

90 Per Cent of Land Rented to U. S. Used To Produce Food, Feed Crops

Ninety per cent of the land rented to the federal government for non-production of cotton in 1934, in Georgia, was used in the production of food and feed crops, according to a letter written March 21 by Secretary H. A. Wallace of the United States Department of Agriculture to Senator Richard B. Russell Jr.

Of the remaining ten per cent, 5 per cent was used in soil improvement and the other 5 per cent in erosion control crops, Mr. Wallace states, taking his figures from surveys made by representatives of the AAA. Total rented cotton acreage in Georgia last year was 1,190,000 acres, it is stated.

The letter to Senator Russell was in reference to a communication from Charles J. Haden, chairman of the farm adjustment commission for Georgia, in which he suggested that the government require all cotton farmers obtaining rental money to withdraw cotton, to put these idle lands into food crops as a condition precedent to payment of the money.

Mr. Haden had suggested that this would tend to give people work and keep them off the relief rolls, but Secretary Wallace in his reply points out that the cotton acreage program has not caused increased need for relief in Georgia. He cites the value of the crop in 1932 as only 35 million dollars, compared to the 1933 value, including benefit payments of 75 millions and estimated value for the 1934 crop of 87 millions.

"Each contract signer," Secretary Wallace states, "agrees to allow his tenants, rent free, an adequate portion of the rented acres for the production of food and feed crops for home consumption. Investigations show that contract signers generally have faithfully fulfilled this provision of the contract.

"Contract signers also agree to retain, as nearly as possible the same number of tenants as were on the farm prior to the adjustment program and investigations show that they have fulfilled this provision of the contract. Any reduction of tenant families would, therefore, likely be on farms not under contract and since approximately 90 per cent of Georgia cotton acreage is under contract, such cases must be few."

Library Group Seeks To Assemble Records, Papers, Books of South

Concerted efforts are being made by southern libraries, universities and patriotic societies under the leadership of a committee of the American Library Association to assemble and preserve valuable southern documents, newspapers, books and magazines which in time will reflect the true life and atmosphere of the south.

The committee on resources of southern libraries which is leading the campaign and which is headed by R. B. Downs, librarian of the University of North Carolina, chairman, met at the Biltmore hotel Tuesday afternoon at the final session of a two-day meeting.

Progress in assembling the various valuable documents, books and other items in the collection was reported in all the 13 southern states from Virginia to Texas, according to Mr. Downs.

The material, he said, is being collected and preserved to develop resources for research and graduate study in a number of library centers in the south.

He said that in Atlanta the various colleges were co-operating and were co-ordinating their efforts to avoid duplications and that already many valuable items had been unearthed.

In Nashville, Vanderbilt and Peabody are co-operating, and the universities of North Carolina and Duke are co-operating in the work in North Carolina, he said.

When the task nears completion the committee of the American Library Association, which he represents, will conduct a southwide survey of the libraries and regional union catalogs will be assembled which will show what books are in the libraries in various sections, Mr. Downs added.

Members of the committee who attended the meetings were Carl H. Milam, executive secretary of the American Library Association; H. L. Webb, librarian, Tulane University; Donald Coney, librarian, University of Texas; B. H. Branscomb, director of libraries, Duke University; Harry Clemons, librarian of the University of Virginia; Margaret Jamison, librarian, Emory University; W. L. Hall, state librarian of Virginia; F. W. C. Drury, librarian, Nashville public library, and Miss Tommie Dora Barker, original field agent of the south of the American Library Association.

JOE HENRY FINDS MISTAKE IN NAME BRINGS FREEDOM

Joe Henry McMullins, recently of Fulton tower, will tell you there's plenty in a name and doubtless would be willing to debate the matter with Shakespeare himself.

McMullins was indicted March 1 by Fulton county grand jury under the name of Henry M. Mullins, charged with burglary. It was discovered later the correct name was Joe Henry McMullins, and a bill for reindictment was prepared to correct the inaccuracy.

Ordinarily such a procedure is merely a matter of form, but Tuesday's grand jury undid the work of the preceding jury and returned a no-bill, and McMullins was released.

Asked if another bill would be presented against the negro, an attache in the solicitor-general's office said the case will be dropped, remarking that:

"Any man who gets a break like that ought not to have it spoiled for him."

Cooking School Planned By Quality Service Stores

Constitution To Sponsor Elaborate Event Opening at Georgia Theater Next Tuesday.

Plans for one of the most elaborate cooking schools ever held in Atlanta were completed Tuesday night at the meeting of the board of directors of the Quality Service Stores.

The school be held at the Georgia theater, opening next Tuesday morning for a four-day session, and will be sponsored by The Atlanta Constitution.

This will be the second school held by the Quality Service Stores, the success of the first one, last year, being largely responsible for the decision to repeat the event this year.

Miss Viola Decker, of the home economics department of the Edison General Electric Appliance Co., Inc., who has conducted a large number of schools in Atlanta, including the first Quality Service School, has been engaged as demonstrator.

Graduate of Institute.

Miss Decker is a graduate of Stout Institute, having specialized in home economics. She has been connected with the Edison General Electric Appliance Company, manufacturer of Hot Point ranges, for a number of years and has conducted classes in electric cookery in many leading universities and colleges. In addition she has had charge of cooking schools in Birmingham, Mobile, Nashville, Chattanooga, Athens, Columbus, Miami, Jacksonville, Tampa, Winston-Salem, Greensboro, Raleigh, Charleston, Columbia and Greenville, as well as Atlanta.

All indications poitn to an even more successful school this year than the one held by Q. S. S. in 1934, officials of the organization declare and it is expected this will result in a large increase in attendance.

The membership of the Atlanta unit of Q. S. S. now totals 180, all being individually owned and operated stores. The organization has had its own warehouse for several years and has shown a steady increase in business.

Cooking Expert

VIOLA DECKER.

Manufacturers Co-operate.

Manufacturers and local food distributors whose products are handled by the stores are co-operating wholeheartedly with the organization in staging the school, as well as a number of other local merchants in different lines of business.

The programs will be varied daily and the home-makers of Atlanta will have an opportunity to learn how they can economize in preparing meals, how they may have more leisure for themselves and how to eliminate kitchen drudgery.

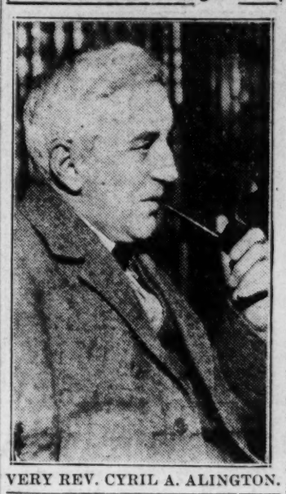

Each day's session will begin at 9 a. m. with the doors of the theater opening an hour earlier.

Jury Indicts 2 Men For Showing Picture

Fulton county grand jury returned indictments Tuesday against Allen Minday and William Lochovitch, charging misdemeanors in three counts in connection with the showing of a motio picture entitled "The Count," the film of which was confiscated Saturday night by the solicitor-general's cleanup squad.

Before considering the bill presented, the grand jurors witnessed a showing of the film in the basement of the courthouse. The film was said by officers to have been shown in a room in a downtown building, patrons paying $1 admission.

CHANGE IN PROCEDURE AIDS FHA BORROWERS

Millsaps Announces Applications May Be Made at Any Insuring Office.

To stimulate activity with respect to mortgages on dwellings to be insured under the National Housing Act and to assist borrowers to more readily contact willing lenders, borrowers may now apply direct to the Federal Housing Administration through any of its insuring offices for appraisal of property, approval of credit responsibility of the borrower and determination of the eligibility of the mortgage for insurance.

Announcement of this change in procedure was made Tuesday by John W. Millsaps, director of the sixth region of the FHA, upon orders from James A. Moffett, federal housing administrator. This additional facility means that a prospective borrower, whether on new construction or for refunding an existing mortgage, may present his application for a loan with any of the insuring offices of the administration.

JUST NUTS

MAIDEN VOYAGE

By Kathleen Norris

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE:

Antoinette Taft, 28, and attractive, girl, is delighted with her job as society editor of the San Francisco Call. She lives with her elder sister, Brenda, her brothers Cliff and Bruce, and Aunt Meg. On the Call staff is a blond named Bess Cutter, who gets a large salary and keeps a fine apartment at which Fra'k Fitch, the managing editor, is a frequent visitor. When Bess asks Tony to make one of a dinner party there, Tony asks the advice of her friend, Barney Kerr. This results in a proposal, the last thing Tony wants. She meets a Mrs. Bellamy and is thrilled to find that her husband is Larry Bellamy handsome young editor of the Journal, whom she had met while job-hunting. Mrs. Bellamy is a frail woman, 10 years older than Larry. She and Tony become fast friends. Tony is the Bellamy's guest at Santa Barbara, and as Larry is driving her back a truck hits their car. He thinks she is badly hurt, and she hears him saying, "Tony, m darling, my darling." He merges his Journal with the Call and becomes associate editor of the Call, but is so busy that Tony sees little of him before the marriage of Brenda and young Dr. Alvin Atwater, of Monterey. Larry leaves a note on her desk saying Ruth is back in the city and wants Tony to dine with her. Tony gets it a day late, the day of the wedding, and goes to his office. His manner is casual, and she bursts into tears, sobbing, "If you don't understand——" Larry has difficulty controlling his emotions, but does, and when Tony gets home she has a feeling of hopelessness. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALMENT XX.

"Oh, heavens, did you ever know it to fail! There's Larry; not a word about the birthday, Tony. Who's with him?"

Larry had been about to seat himself at a near-by table. Now he saw them and came smilingly over to stand with the proud air of an exhibitor beside the round-faced squarely built blond young man who was his companion. Ruth blinked for a minute, half rose with a delighted cry.

"Joe! My dear! Joe Vanderwall! Where on earth did you come from?"

The newcomer stooped to kiss her; was presented to Tony. Tony saw pleasant blue eyes and liked the simple friendly smile. What could he be—Danish, Norse?

"This is—what?" Ruth explained, her faded face a flush of excitement and satisfaction as they all took their places. "Joe, you're my half-brother's son, what does that make me? Stepaunt? Anyway," she said to Tony, "this is Mother,s adored grandson, and Larry,s brother—you,ve heard us talk of Caroline?"

"I knew there were children but I thought they were the sandbox and romper size," Tony said. "I didn't know they were grown up. The picture of you Dr. Vanderwall," she said to the man beside her, "is in uniform."

"Military prep school," he explained, his eyes drinking her in.

The room, which had seemed to rise and turn and waver as Larry came up, settled into place and they were all easily talking together.

"This feller got in on a boat this morning," Larry said. "I tried to telephone you, tried to telephone your mother. No use. So I thought I'd take him to lunch, then try again."

"Well, Joe, your darling," Ruth kept saying happily. Her face was radiant. Tony furtively studied the nephew of whom she was evidently fond and proud. He looked nice. Fair hair somewhat rumpled; fine big lean brown hands; age perhaps 30. A doctor? Probably a surgeon. She gathered presently that he was interested in biologic research.

She had often heard the names "Big Joe" and "Little Joe." Big Joe was Ruth's half-brother. Mrs. Patterson was very proud of him. He was a—what was it, an engineer of some sort? Anyway, they had always lived in East Africa, Big Joe and his wife, and there were children. Caroline was one of the children, evidently, and this nice Joe another. But somehow Tony had never connected the reputedly fascinating Caroline with the Joes; Ruth had so many relatives and they were all vague and far away to Tony.

Immediately Ruth was deep in hospitable plans. Joe must stay with them of course and she would get just a few nice people for a dinner that night. Joe couldn't come that night. He had to dine with a scientist in Berkeley. Tomorrow night, then? Swell. And Tony, too? But Tony would have to run away to the Friday Night.

"What is the Friday Night?" asked Joe.

"A dance," Tony explained smiling. "Could I go?"

"I could certainly get you a card for the dance," Ruth told him. "I'm one of their patronesses. But Tony goes—"

"As the social reporter of the Call," supplied Tony as Ruth hesitated.

"Don't you like to dance?"

"I adore it. But there's a lot more to these dances than dancing."

"I'll bet there is!" Dr. Vanderwall agreed. "Ruth, she's grand!" he said delightedly of Tony, who laughed and flushed in a girl's pleasure at the immediate conquest. "Now what can we do to celebrate? I'll tell you what. I'll cut the scientist and you cut whatever you're doing tonight, and let's all go somewhere and dance?"

"I couldn't, not Thursday," Tony said shaking her head.

"You mean to be a little inaccesible, Miss Taft. You don't seem to appreciate the fact that I've come into your life. Don't you feel my nearness?"

"I can't say that do—yet."

"Behave yourself, Joe," said Ruth, not quite pleased despite her indulgent tone and smile. "I never heard you so foolish!"

"The bad news for Miss Taft is that I'm here for three years."

"Three years!"

"Yep. Hochenheimer Foundation. Flora and fauna. I'm to have a lab down at Carmel-by-the-Sea, wherever that is!"

"Oh, it's a lovely place!" Tony said enthusiastically. "My sister lives at Monterey—at least," Tony amended it, flushing and laughing, "she has since yesterday."

"Since yesterday!" What is this, a joke?"

"No, seriously. She was married yesterday."

"You Taft girls seem to be going fast," said Joe.

"You must forgive him, Tony; he's quite crazy today!" Ruth apologized.

"No, I'm not, Aunt Ruth. But I'm excited. A week ago I was plugging away in Philadeljhia as if nothing was ever going to happen in the world. Talmage was going to California—the old fellow had been planning for it for two years. The day before he was to leave what does his aunt in Jenkintown do but die and leave him and his mother a pot of money. Brauer sent for me and I climbed on a train and I haven't got my breath yet! This city—" young Dr. Vanderwall went on enthusiastically, "I'm mad about it! The hills, the bay, ships, Chinese streets, mountains; I never saw anything like it in my life!"

Tony liked him; it was impossible not to like him; she was amazed to have Larry praise him quite extravagantly as he and she walked to the newspaper office together. For Larry had got to his feet and said, "So do I," when Tony said she had to go back to the office. She had been thinking all night that she would never see him again; that she never could look him in the face again, and now here they were walking along together in the most casual way imaginable. Again her heart was singing.

"Joe?" said Larry. "He's an extraordinary person. He's a freak."

"He doesn't seem exactly a freak."

"I tell you he is. He did phenomenal things in college. He took all the honors there were, went to Oxford, wrote a paper that excited the German botanists; he went over there and lectured to 'em in German."

"He couldn't. He doesn't look more than 22 with that round face and yellow hair!"

"He's nearly as old as I am. Three or four years younger. He's a darned important person. He'll be in charge of the Hochenheimer offices here. Everybody thinks he's a ball of fire."

"You can hardly believe it, he's so giddy," Tony murmured as they entered the big newspaper building. Her mind was not on her words; she caught suddenly at Larry's arm. 'Larry,' she began a little thickly. 'About yesterday—"

His quick intelligent look met hers. He did not speak.

"I'm terribly sorry—I'm terribly sorry," Tony stumbled on. She stood close beside him in the dark downstairs hallway. "Larry, I've despised myself ever since—' she faltered. I would have given anything, anything in this world not to have done that, not to have said that!"

"Then suppose we consider it as not having been said, not having been done, Tony?" the man suggested simply after a little pause.

"If you could," she stammered, the rich color rushing into her pale face.

"All right then, it didn't happen!" he said. And Tony went on up to the city office in a very vertigo of joy, as happy today as she had been wretched yesterday. Two or three times, while she was plowing gallantly through the scattered notes and pages that would somehow frame themselves into the sprightly social page of Madame La Duchesse next Sunday, she stopped and put her elbows on the desk and her face into her hands for sheer ecstasy.

She had no trouble getting her Sunday photographs now; it was all hack work. Now and then she had to stay very late for one cause or another, stay after most of the men had drifted away at midnight, until Frank Fitch's office was dark and only two or three of the city room reporters remained, and faithful Ingersoll was at the Associated Press desk, and drunken Goldberg was the night editor. Tony always found this experience thrilling; it was a wonderful thing to be a part of the old paper and have one's share in putting it "to bed."

In and out of the big hotels, meeting ministers and ambassadors on their way to and from the Orient, and writers and actresses and film folk; in and out of the city hall, getting to know the mayor, meeting the governor, known to the presidents of the clubs, Miss Taft went her tireless and busy way. All June was busy with commencement exercises and the latter half of December was filled with yuletide cheer. Youngsters were coming home from eastern schools; every club had a dinner or a tree. Tony, violets on her shoulders, her cheeks rosy in the cold air, played her own part in all their lives.

"You're so sure of yourself!" Brenda said admiringly. "You're different. I hardly know you, Tony."

"You're never sure of yourself in the newspaper game, Bendy. Anyone may be out, and anyone may be in, at a moment's notice."

"You don't have to worry!" Brenda said in fond pride. She stood with her back to the microscopic sink she had just reduced to immaculate cleanness, and smiled at her sister.

"A bankers' convention was meeting at Del Monte which is near Monterey, and Tony had been sent down to cover the feminine interests of the occasion. She and Brenda could be together for long quiet hours during the three days for the busy times for Tony were in the late afternoon and evening, when the bankers came in from meetings or golf, and social activities began.

SALLY'S SALLIES

Too much of our uplift is confined to noses.

The DEBUNKER

By John Harvey Furbay, Ph.D.

On Valentine Day we send hearts to our loved ones. However, the heart has nothing more to do with our affections than has the liver—or probably not as much. The heart is only a pump to keep the blood in circulation. A lover might just as well offer his stomach as his heart. No one knows exactly where the seat of the affections is, except that it is surely somewhere in the nervous system, and is also partially regulated by various glands. The entire emotional nature is involved in one's affections, and the emotions are affected by the functioning of nearly all the bodily organs, especially those of digestion.

UNCLE RAY'S CORNER

FAMOUS FLYERS.
III—Charles A. Lindbergh.

When Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh made a solo flight across the Atlantic in 1927, he rose to greater fame than any other aviator. The world was waiting for a new and striking deed in the field of aviation; and young Lindbergh performed such a deed.

Lindbergh was not the first to cross the Atlantic. Alcock and Brown had made a non-stop flight in 1919; and others had crossed by seaplane or Zeppelin; but the young American pilot was the first to do it alone.

Charles A. Lindbergh.

He flew from New York to Paris, and won a prize which many older aviators had wanted to win.

Lindbergh was born in Detroit in 1902. Not long afterward, the family moved to Little Falls, Minn. His father later became a congressman. After finishing high school, young Lindbergh entered the University of Wisconsin. He did not obtain a degree; but he turned his studies to the field of aviation. Entering a flying school at Lincoln, Neb., he studied and practiced until he could fly a plane alone.

In 1924 he became a cadet in the United States Air Service Reserve at San Antonio, Texas. Two years later, as a member of the air mail service, he started carrying mail from Chicago to St. Louis.

With the help of friends in St. Louis, he raised funds for building an airplane which he could use in an attempt to cross the Atlantic. This plane was called the "Spirit of St. Louis."

In May, 1927, he piloted the plane from San Diego to Long Island, the flying time from coast to coast being 21 hours and 20 minutes and marking a record. This record has been cut in half by other aviators.

Setting out on a Friday morning, Lindbergh flew northeastward, and then east until he passed above Ireland. He landed at a Paris airport the night of the next day. There was a mighty welcome for him at Paris, and he was hailed as a world hero.

ACCORD REACHED ON TEXTILE PLAN

NRA Sets Up Machinery To Adjust Productive Mill Capacity.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—(AP)—The NRA, acting to avert the closing of many units in the cotton textile industry, today set up machinery to adjust productive capacity of its various divisions to existing consumer demand.

While no general reduction in machine hours is contemplated, the order declared an emergency existed in the industry and authorized the code authority to limit machine operation during the next 12 weeks wherever such restriction is found necessary.

The provision was included that such adjustments would not require reductions of more than 25 per cent in the hours of operations permitted by the code or in the maximum number of machines operating within six months prior to the period of reduction.

To provide safeguards for labor, management and consumers, the order also provides for the creation of a research and planning committee to consist of three members to be appointed by the chairman of the code authority—none of whom are to have any interest in any unit in the industry—and a technical adviser to be appointed by the NRA.

Basis of Approval.

Under the procedure established today, action of the code authority, based on a recommendation of the research and planning committee, always will be subject to approval by the National Recovery Board.

The program was praised by George A. Sloan, chairman of the code authority, but the reaction of the United Textile Workers was not made known. It was understood, however, that the labor group was less kindly disposed to the program.

It was a general 90-day curtailment order a year ago that precipitated the labor unrest which led eventually to the general textile strike of last September. With hours reduced from 40 to 30, the workers complained they were suffering an actual total wage cut of 25 per cent.

For several weeks the newly created textile planning committee and the code authority have sought a more flexible means of production adjustment.

Causes of Trouble.

Todays' action was one step in a program aimed at bringing relief to the cotton manufacturers, now suffering from overproduction, increasing competition from low cost Japanese textiles, and heavy increases in the cost of raw material as a result of the cotton processing tax.

"The order," Sloan said, "makes possible immediate steps temporarily to adjust plant operations in the various groups of the cotton textile industry to the ability of the market to absorb the products of those groups. This will make possible the continued employment of many thousands of mill operatives in many mills, who have been facing the certainty of immediate and indefinite layoffs. The available work in the industry will be spread more generally among the mills and the communities dependent on them."

Ocean Fliers Convicted In Operation of Still

NEW YORK, March 26.—(AP) Joseph and Benjamin Adamowicz, who made an airplane flight from Brooklyn to their native Poland last June, were found guilty today of conspiracy to operate an unregistered still.

A third brother, Bronislaw Adamowicz, was found guilty on the same charge. They were remanded to jail for sentence Thursday. It was the second trial, the first ending in a jury disagreement.

The alleged still with a capacity of 1,800 gallons a day was found in a garage owned by the brothers. They contended they had leased the garage to another man.

Showers Scheduled For This Afternoon

Cloudy weather this morning, followed by showers this afternoon or tonight is Atlanta's weather menu, according to George W. Mindling, forecaster here.

Lower temperatures than those of the past few days are expected to prevail, with the maximum around 68 degrees and a minimum of 44 degrees set for early this morning. The mercury climbed to 75 degrees Tuesday, with an early morning low mark of 57 degrees.

Yeomans Gives Ruling On State Repeal Vote

Only those citizens of the state qualified to vote in the general election of November, 1934, are eligible to vote in the prohibition repeal, beer legalization and wine legislation referenda May 15, Attorney-General Yeomans ruled Tuesday.

The ruling follows:

"Only those whose names were on the list of qualified registered voters at the last general election can vote in the special elections.

"No one who has registered since May 5, 1934, or who registers now can vote in the elections of May 15."

DISPUTED IDENTITY FAILS TO STOP FUNERAL

LAUREL, Miss., March 26.—(AP)—The physical evidence in the Laurel "legs murder case" was buried today in the cemetery at McNeill, Miss., in a grave beside that of the husband of Mrs. Daisy Keeton.

The "evidence" consisted of the severed thighs and lower torso of a white woman found in the woods near Laurel on January 21 by a negro rabbit hunter and identified as a portion of the body of Mrs. Daisy Keeton, widow of the man by whose side the legs were laid to rest.

Both officers and a Jones county circuit jury accepted the remains as a portion of the butchered body of Mrs. Keeton, whose death has never been conceded by members of her family.

PRICE OF SUGAR AGAIN ADVANCED

NEW YORK, March 26.—(AP)—For the second consecutive day leading sugar refiners advanced the price of refined sugar effective throughout the various territories served.

Arbuckle Bros. early today posted an advance of .20 of a cent, making the price 4.70 cents and announced at the same time that they would not consider new offers today but would make allottments to regular customers at this figure. The American Sugar Refining Company met this figure but stated that all orders would be subjected to confirmation.

COTTON CODE SUIT DISMISSED BY JUDGE

WASHINGTON, March 26.—(UP) District Supreme Court Justice Oscar R. Luhring today dismissed a suit for reinstatement brought by three former members of the Cotton Garment Code Authority.

The three, who charged they were illegally removed, are: Lee H. Jones, W. E. Stevens, Nashville, and E. M. Joplin. Justice Luhring held that since they were serving without pay they did not have sufficient grounds to maintain a suit for positions on the authority.

'SUPPRESSION' LAID TO SOVIET PROBERS

Tinkham Makes Charge as Committee Halts Recognition Hearing.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—(AP)—Representative Tinkham, republican, Massachusetts, tonight charged that the house foreign affairs committee in abruptly canceling a scheduled hearing today had "suppressed" information which showed cause for severing relations with soviet Russia.

The committee planned a meeting in executive session to discuss Tinkham's resolution for congress to go on record as favoring withdrawal of recognition from Russia. They wanted the bearded Bostonian to agree not to discuss the testimony given on the house floor.

He refused to be bound and the committee headed by Representative McReynolds, democrat, Tennessee, balked at hearing him or the witnesses he had waiting in an anteroom.

It was only after weeks of work that Tinkham succeeded in getting promise of a hearing by the committee of which he is a member. He had an imposing list from patriotic and other organizations assembled to testify. They waited patiently a half-hour or longer. Then suddenly Tinkham, obviously indignant, stalked from the committee room and announced to their open-mouthed amazement:

"The hearing is over."

"But what will I tell my people in California," pleaded a prospective woman witness when Chairman McReynolds, democrat, Tennessee, came out.

"You'll have to ask Mr. Tinkham, who brought you here," the chairman replied pleasantly, drawing on his ever-present pipe.

McReynolds, in an informal statement to newspapermen, explained what had happened. Representative Bloom, democrat, New York, put the motion that carried by a majority party vote not to go ahead with the hearings.

Tinkham, after thinking the matter over all day, issued a formal statement, saying in part:

"The action of the majority of the committee on foreign affairs in refusing to hold the hearing set for today . . . even in executive session, is revolutionary. Expert witnesses representing national organizations had come from distant points to testify.

"The American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars were ready, as well as members of our military and naval forces. Detailed documentary evidence had been carefully prepared for presentation to the committee. The committee refused to hear the witnesses or to accept the evidence."

"There can be only one explanation for this action," he concluded. . . . The committee knew that if the American people were fully informed concerning the insidious work of the alien enemy in our midst, they would insist upon the immediate severance of diplomatic relations with the soviet union."

McReynolds said the disagreement today ended the incident. He said Secretary Hull recently had insisted formally that the matter was one over which congress had no authority.

Radio Plant Workers Attacked by Strikers

CINCINNATI, March 26—(AP)—Shouting crowds pulled clothing from six girl workers and attacked men leaving the plant of the Crosley Radio Corporation late today.

Rallying 50 extra policemen to aid forces already on duty, Chief of Police Eugene L. Weatherly estimated a growing throng of 7,000 strikers, sympathizers, and onlookers gathered at the plant as workers who refused to strike began to leave for their homes.

Police reported frequent blows struck between workers and strikers but reported only one arrest.

Street cars were stopped directly in front of the plant so that workers could reach shelter quickly.

CULBERTSONS CUT SIMS BRIDGE LEAD

forgot all about the Sims system, and in one hand where I made a ludicrous slam try without an ace or a king and with but one queen (and that after a series of minimum responses from my wife) I bucked up thereafter and played a practically unbeatable game.

It was at this juncture that I ran across the following hand, which demands the use of tools of the greatest precision in a bridge player's equipment. Mrs. Culbertson, bidding with consummate elegance, gave me an opportunity to play and make a slam contract, which is one of the most thrilling hands I have played in a long time, since it involved handling a cross-ruff and getting a grand coup at the twelfth trick.

Hal Sims opened the five of clubs which was won in dummy with the king and the nine of hearts lead. Mrs. Sims, East, won the ace and returned the jack of clubs on which I discarded a heart, winning in dummy with the ace. Two high spades were cashed and the third spade trumped with the four of diamonds. A heart was now led and trumped with the six of diamonds and a club returned which I trumped with my five of diamonds. Another heart lead was trumped with dummy's nine and a fourth club led on which Mrs. Sims discarded her eight of spades. This was trumped with the ten of diamonds. My last heart was now trumped with the ace of diamonds in dummy and Mrs. Sims was forced to under trump. Dummy's next lead found Mrs. Sims holding the queen and a small diamond, helpless against my remaining king and jack.

Blood Grouping Now Evidence In New York Courts of Law

ALBANY, N. Y., March 26.—(AP)—New York courts, burdened with heavy calendars, were authorized today to employ "blood grouping tests" as a scientific way of determining when New Yorkers are innocent of certain crimes and civil offenses charged against them.

While a group of physicians and scientists looked on, Governor Hubert H. Lehman formally signed three laws authorizing judges to compare the blood of suspects with other evidence.

A pinprick in a prisoner's flesh, a chemical process developed at Jewish hospital, Brooklyn, and a microscopic examination—and some men can be set free, under the plan described to the governor.

"It has long been known to the medical profession that under certain circumstances the human body holds within itself the alibi to the unfounded charge," Supreme Court Justice Meier Steinbrink, of New York city, said in a letter to the governor.

Justice Steinbrink, who said he was unable to attend the bill-signing, predicted many legal abuses growing out of paternity and assault cases will disappear because an innocent man can prove his innocence.

Dr. A. S. Wiener, associate in the division of genetics and biometrics at Jewish hospital, explained how the tests can be applied in crime as well as in cases of disputed fatherhood.

Tests are made of a mother, child and the husband.

"If the mother belongs to group A, the child to group B, and the husband to group A, the husband could not be the father since the child possesses a substance B which neither of the supposed parents has," Dr. Wiener said.

Assemblyman Charles A. Breitbart, New York city republican, sponsor of the three bills passed by the legislature, said the tests would eliminate some of 8,000 bastardy suits filed in New York each year. The accused man might demonstrate his innocence by a comparison of blood tests, Breitbart said.

"In criminal cases the tests are of value for purposes of identification," Dr. Wiener said.

"While pursuing a criminal, the police shoot and wound him, but he escapes. Some of the criminal's blood left at the scene is grouped and found to belong to group B, type M. Later several individuals are apprehended and it is known that one of these has committed the crime.

"All individuals except those belonging to group B, type M, can be eliminated immediately."

RAIL HEADS STUDY RATE DIFFERENTIALS

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 26. (UP)—A committee of six railroad vice presidents, with the co-operation of Governor Bibb Graves, today opened an investigation of "unfair differentials between freight rates in the south and other sections.

At the governor's request, representatives of southern railroads met with him to lay plans for an "energetic fight to obtain more equitable schedules" to the rich mid-western and northern markets.

"Give me the ammunition," the governor told the committee as it started to gather data," and I'll do the shooting.

The committee was to confer with Hugh White, president of the Alabama Public Service Commission, this afternoon.

SPY TRIAL ABASHES FRANCO-RUSS PARLEY

Court Told To Soft-Pedal Evidence Linking Reds to 21 Suspects.

PARIS, March 26.—(AP)—The soft pedal had been applied, it was reported today, to talk of a soviet spy ring at the trial of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gordon Switz and 19 fellow suspects, after a hint from the foreign office.

Officials are understood to have cautioned the court against developing anything that might embarrass Foreign Minister Pierre Laval. He goes to Moscow next month to seal Franco-Russian friendship in view of the troubled European situation.

All of those arrested 15 months ago and many others who are missing are alleged to have sought French military secrets for the Russian government.

Mrs. Clara Levitan Bercowitz was released from prison on bail after Switz, whose home is in East Orange, N. J., testified she had nothing to do with the ring. Her husband, Benjamin, protesting his own innocence, said his wife had no part in the matter either.

Bercowitz defied the Switzes' charges of participation in the ring. The prosecution contends he was the real chief. There was documentary evidence tending to show that Bercowitz, a Rumanian, paid other members of the group with soviet money.

The prosecution began by dividing up the defendants, according to the roles they are charged with playing in the suspected ring.

Getting down to individual cases the court began by questioning the Switzes' alleged accomplices, hearing the witnesses, pleas of the defense counsel and the summing up by the prosecutor after each defendant quit the stand.

Lucy Yundt and Classmates Plan Bicycle Trip Through Europe

By Sally Forth.

BICYCYLING through Europe's rural country for two months is the thrilling experience awaiting Lucy Yundt and a group of her classmates following their graduation at Vassar College in June. Sally learned this piece of news soon after the arrival of Lucy and the trio of friends who will accompany her to Europe, here Tuesday to spend the spring vacation with Lucy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Yundt. The quartet of youthful travelers will include, in adidtion to Lucy, Misses Joy MacCracken, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; Margaret Walker, of New York city, and Katharine Spencer, of Boston, Mass.

Traveling on the continent, however, will not be done entirely by bicycle. Only the picturesque rural sections of Holland, Italy, France and Germany will be viewed by this mode of travel. Many days will be spent in the larger cities of these foreign countries where motor trips and sightseeing tours will occupy their time and attention. Before returning to the states the girls and their chaperons will visit England where more bicycling will be enjoyed through that country's beautiful rural land.

Soon after the young graduates' return from Europe each will begin upon a career. Atlanta friends are muchly interested in the decision made by Lucy to make finance her business pursuit. Majoring in economics and mathematics at Vassar ably qualifies this young Atlanta belle to start upon a business venture. And who knows to what heights of success this decision will lead attractive and practical Lucy Yundt? Atlanta may yet boast of a feminine bank president!

Both Miss Spencer and Miss Walker have chosen social service as their endeavor. Before beginning her work seriously Miss Walker, whose father is the well-known Dr. John B. Walker, of New York, will take a post-graduate course in social service at the University of Chicago. As a member of the New York Junior League this charming Vassar senior has already had wide experience in this field of service sponsored by the league in the Metropolis where she made her debut three years ago. Miss Spencer will begin her social service work in Boston, where her father, Carl M. Spencer, is a leading figure in banking circles.

'Tis a far cry from the careers selected by her classmates that Miss MacCracken has planned to follow. Unusually gifted in art this young graduate, daughter of Vassar's president, Dr. Henry Noble MacCracken, will make portrait painting her profession. Her work already shows the natural genius of the painter as well as the ability of expressing with the brush her conception of the subject.

Lucy and her classmates expect to return to Vassar on Sunday in the same motor car that brought them here on Tuesday. Incidentally, it was an eventful trip for the Vassar seniors. Stops were made en route for "eats" and refreshing cold drinks. At Asheville the young motorists were delayed several hours by engine trouble. Long distance telephone kept the girls in constant communication with Lucy's parents. And much to the delight of friends, the quartet arrived just in time Tuesday evening for the buffet supper planned in their honor by Lucy's twin sister, Marion.

MR. AND MRS. JACK STRAUS said au revoir to Atlanta on Monday and departed for New York. They were feted at a perfect round of social affairs during their all-too-short visit here. These interesting New Yorkers are exceedingly popular with their Atlanta friends and provide inspiration for worlds of parties. Mrs. Straus is a very charming and beautiful woman, and never misses an opportunity to accompany her attractive husband upon his trips to Georgia.

Mrs. Straus is planning to sail for Paris on April 7. She will visit United States Ambassador to France and Mrs. Jesse I. Straus at their home in the French capital. Among the prominent Americans to be presented at the Court of St. James in Buckingham Palace on Thursday will be Mrs. Jesse I. Straus, mother-in-law of Mrs. Jack Straus.

During their stay in London, United States Ambassador to France and Mrs. Straus are visiting United States Ambassador to the Court of St. James and Mrs. Robert W. Bingham, at the American Embassy.

NEWS of brides is always intriguing. Which reminds Sally to tell you a story of a bride of some years ago, who is now a prominent figure among Atlanta's social leaders.

Following her marriage she began housekeeping in a charming cottage near the parental roof. Each morning Lizzie (for want of a better name) took her market basket and went to her mother's well-stocked pantry. There she filled it with whatever her day's menus called for. It was much simpler than shopping for groceries elsewhere.

Apparently it was much simpler, too, to go to mother's for other things. Whenever she needed a piece of bric-a-brac or a picture, perhaps, to adorn some particular spot, she immediately thought of one that mother could easily part with. It was the same with chairs, with tables, and with numerous other things, until Lizzie's house was completely furnished.

Then one night this happened: Mother, waking from a deep sleep, heard some one moving about in the house. She quietly nudged father and told him about it. Perfectly indifferent to her fright, he merely turned over and went back to sleep. She nudged him again. "You must get up and see who's in the house," she whispered. The only response was an unconcerned grunt. For the third time, she called him and told him there was a burglar in the house and he was probably taking off everything they possessed.

Whereupon father raised himself on one elbow and replied: "Well, what difference does it make? What he doesn't take, Lizzie will."

Joan's New Clothes Show Outgrowth of Little Girl's Outfits

By FLORENCE La GANKE.

The days were getting spring-like. It was getting close to Easter and Aunt Nancy was going shopping with Joan to get her new clothes. Peter was envious. "Aw gee, Mom, girls get all the breaks. Why can't I have something new? I am tired of suits and suits and more suits." "Sorry, son, but you'll have to stay tired for a long, long time. Men and boys as old as you wear suits and suits and suits. But you can change your ties, so I'll bring you home a nice new one. How's that?"

When Joan and her aunt came home they showed the new clothes with great eclat. Joan, who was ten years old, had reached the point where simple dresses hanging from the shoulders were too juvenile. So her aunt purchased a gingham dress with a tight-fitting bodice, simple white organdy cuffs and collar edged with a ruffle of the gingham.

Down the front of the dress went marble-like buttons in bright yellow. The dress was of yellow and brown check gingham.

Her coat was different, too. Heretofore, she had worn the regulation blue reefer-like coat. But this one was of tweed, cut in an English style with quite a form-fitting line at the waist. An inverted plait down the center back gave fullness to the skirt. There is a brown velvet collar to the coat. Her hat is of tweed which matches the coat. Nancy purchased another hat in brown the color of the velvet.

With both of these hats and the new outfit Nancy felt that Joan's curls needed a little taming. Sure enough, the child was growing up. Flying little girl curls were now a thing of the past. Nancy realized anew that children do grow up and that years do fly. Eight years had made great changes in her niece. Who would have thought, eight years ago, that Joan would still be with her beloved Aunt Nancy and Uncle Peter.

Nancy has a recipe on "Waffles" which she will gladly send on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address her care of The Atlanta Constitution.

Friendly Counsel

By CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Correspondence invited. Your name held in confidence. Write Miss Chatfield, care The Atlanta Constitution.

Dear Miss Chatfield:

I have been married 13 years to the best hearted man in the world. We have two children. My husband is a poor manager and never has any money. He has trouble getting a job and can't hold one after he gets it. I love him better than my life and excepting the times when he comes home drunk and my temper reaches the boiling point we get along fine. I have grieved over our finances until I am old before my time. I must stay at home 365 days out of the year unles I walk where I want to go. The distances are great and my health is bad. I have no decent clothes and no money to buy what the children need. Sometimes I think I should give my husband a piece of my mind, leave him and look for work so I can live like other women. Can you advise me what to do?
DISCONTENTED WIFE.

Answer:

Why not hold on to the husband and get the job too? He can stay at home and look after the children while you go out and earn the living. An empty purse is bad enough but an empty heart is worse and when a woman loves a man and leaves him she carries a heart that aches from emptiness. There are plenty of reasonably good men who can't make a living and oftener than otherwise they are good natured and easy to live with. The very qualities that make them pleasant, agreeable companions make them inefficient in office, store and factory. They lack force and drive. If they once had any ambition, inability to produce killed it. If they had any bright ideas, laziness smothered them. If they had any pride in accomplishment, repeated failure mortally wounded it. And so they give up the struggle.

A woman married to one of these incompetent men can get out and hustle in these days. The time was when she had to sit still and take what her husband gave her but there are hundreds of ways she can make a living, if she will put her mind to it. Grieving doesn't get her a thing. It makes her old before her time and destroys her efficiency as homemaker and mother.

So, my dear woman, just tell your husband that after 13 years you no longer have any faith in his ability to support you and the children and that you have decided to swap jobs with him. He can stay at home and look after that end and you will go out for the bacon. This will be infinitely better than wrecking your home, taking the children away from their father and giving up the man you love and won't be happy without.

Though you may not believe it, a husband who can't or won't make a living is better than no husband at all, particularly when he is the father of your children. The fact that he is in the background of your life gives you a sense of security that you would miss were you to push him out. He makes a contribution to your life and to your children's lives that can't be measured in dolalrs and cents. His affection for you and the children and yours for him is the central fact of your existence, though you may doubt this too while you are worried and fretted over your financial condition. There is a big satisfaction in being able to say "My husband" and a big satisfaction for the children in being able to say "My father." "A half loaf is better than no bread," but only the starving realize the truth of that adage.
CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Dear Miss Chatfield:

Please tell me why a younger sister delights in horning in on an older sister's dates? I love the older one and have told her so but the younger one still seems to think she has a chance. My girl loves her dearly and I don't want to come between them, but I have enough of this silly young thing sitting on my dates. What can I do?
PERPLEXED.

Answer:

Since it hasn't occurred to you that the sisters may be in league against you, it is rather cruel to suggest this possibility but it is a strong one. A girl that is being crowded by a boy in whom she isn't particularly interested resorts to all kinds of subterfuges to ease the pressure. It is altogether unlikely that an older sister will permit her younger sister to sit out her dates with her if she is in love with the boy. In view of this fact it mightn't be a bad idea for you to tell the older sister that you are fed up on the chaperonage and in case she is not party to it, she will put a quick end to it.

Nothing excites a young girl's interest more than love in the air. She can scent a love affair a long way off. Her sister's beaux set her aquiver and if there is any way she can look at or listen to what is going on she takes it. Not old enough to realize that good taste forbids her to sit on her sister's date she will even do this until she is rebuked. "All the world loves a lover" and nobody loves him so much as a young miss who is looking for one herself.
CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

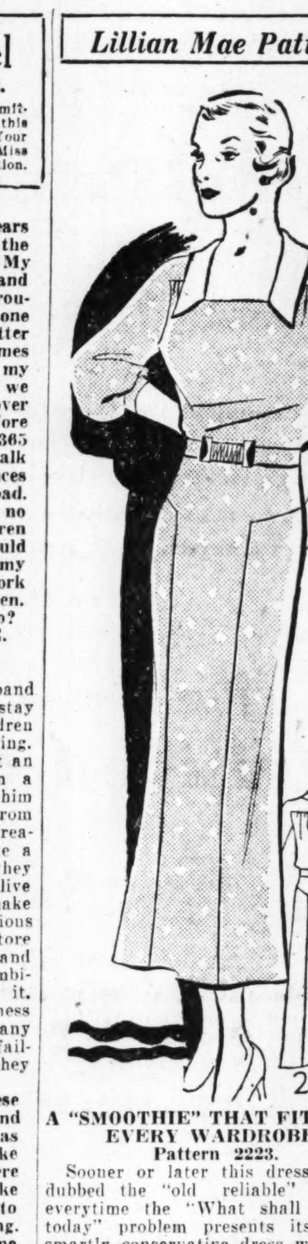

Bilious Attacks, Dizziness

"Bilious attacks," dizziness, spots before the eyes, a feeling of fullness after ordinary meals, belching up of gas, a dull, sluggish feeling—due to constipation—are usually driven away by a dose or two of old, reliable Thedford's Black-Draught.

"I take Black-Draught for biliousness, dizziness, and when I feel dull, tired and stupid," writes Mr. M. L. Simmons, of Pickens, S. C. "It seems to cleanse the system and make one feel a hundred per cent better."

Culbertson on Contract

By ELY CURBERTSON,
World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyist.

Wooden Bidding.

There are certain players who are very hidebound in their bidding ideas. For instance, it is axiomatic that you can best support your partner's notrump bids when you have a balanced hand with your strength scattered over the four suits. There are times, however, when it is not only necessary but almost compulsory to raise your partner' notrump bid, even though you have a singleton or conceivably a void in your hand, when the previous bidding shows your partner must have the opposing suit well stopped. There is one player I know who with two five-card suits has never been known to let his partner play a notrump contract. This, of course, is the height of woodenness. After you have shown your distribution and your partner still wishes to play notrump you must let him play there.

GIVE 'WAY.

Today's hand is an illustration of a similar princple. One of the players makes a very strong overcall and his partner bids two notrump despite the fact that the partner of the opening bidder raises their suit. The overcaller then must not hesitate to raise his partner to three notrump instead of signing off in his own suit, which many weak players might do. The hand follows:

East, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

North: ♠ A 6 2 ♡ A 7 3 2 ◇ 10 7 3 2 ♣ K 7
West: ♠ J 10 8 5 ♡ 10 9 4 ◇ K Q ♣ 10 9 6 4
East: ♠ K Q 9 4 3 ♡ Q J 6 ◇ A 9 6 4 ♣ 8
South: ♠ 7 ♡ K 8 5 ◇ J 8 5 ♣ A Q J 5 3 2

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1♠(1)	2♣(2)	2♠(3)	2NT(4)
Pass	3NT(5)	Pass	Pass
Pass

1—A minimum opening bid, justifiable in view of the distribution and the fact that the strength is held in the majors.
2—A more than sound overcall. South, however, is not good enough to double for a take-out.
3—A borderline free raise.
4—A sure stopper in the opponents' suit, a sure stopped in one of the other suits, a partial stopper in the third and a fine fitting card in partner's suit justify this call despite the fact that partner has only overcalled and both opponents are bidding.
5—A compulsory bid despite innumerable other calls ranging from the sign-off bid of three clubs to the very strong jump to five clubs would be suggested by weak players. South has more than the strength needed to overcall, even though the overcall was made at the level of two-odd. South knows North has heard the opponents bid and support in spades and still North goes to two notrump. North must have either a double spade stopped or a single spade stopper with a good club fit. South cannot merely sign off by rebidding clubs. He can visualize from eight to ten potential tricks at notrump and knows three notrump at the worst cannot be hurt. Opponents should be able to take three tricks, at least, to defeat a minor game and therefore three notrump in the correct contract.

The Play.

There is no play to the hand. East opened the spade king and declarer took with the ace in dummy and after running off a round of clubs, claimed nine tricks to fulfill his contract.

TOMORROW'S HAND.

North, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

North: ♠ J 5 ♡ 8 5 4 ◇ 9 4 ♣ K 9 7 5 3 2
West: ♠ A Q 8 ♡ K J 7 2 ◇ K Q 10 8 7 ♣ J
East: ♠ 9 7 6 4 3 ♡ 10 9 3 ◇ J 3 ♣ 10 8 4
South: ♠ K 10 2 ♡ A Q 6 ◇ A 6 5 2 ♣ A Q 6

This is a three notrump hand with an interesting play to it which will be discussed tomorrow.

Mr. Culbertson will be very glad to answer questions on bridge. Please enclose a stamped (3-cent), self addressed envelope and address your question to Ely Culbertson, in care of The Atlanta Constitution.

YOU'LL ENJOY DOING THIS HANGING.
Pattern 5333.

Here is your chance to thoroughly enjoy your needlework in the making as well as in a finished decoration. A variety of flowers have been skillfully translated into embroidery to make a hanging that will be an interesting color spot in any room. Wool, or a rope silk are excellent for this work. The daisies—dahlias—ageratum—gladiolus are all formed of simple stitches. A variety of color schemes are suggested so that you can fit your colors to your room. The hanging need not be framed, only a lining being necessary. The vase could also be used effectively as a motif on a bedspread.

In pattern 5333 you will find a transfer pattern of a picture 15x20 inches; material requirements; illustrations of all stitches needed; color suggestions; directions for making a hanging.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to Household Arts Dept., The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

(Posed by Jean Muir.)

Lipsticks Are Forever in Season and Good Ones Always in Demand

By MIGNON.

It's been many a season since women first learned that the way to look healthy and bright and merry is to have the right shade of lipstick and use it smartly and courageously.

One thing I've always contended is necessary in a lipstick, and that is that it not be too dry or look too dry. If it is that way it doesn't draw a smooth line. Then, too, if you get a dry lipstick, and I don't consider that good lipsticks are dry lipsticks, you must use a cream over the lipstick. Some women prefer to do that anyway, to get that shiny, theatrical look, but I must be lazy. I'd rather have the one stroke of the lipstick do the whole job.

There are lipsticks and lipsticks, as every woman knows. I've done a pretty thorough job of investigating, and I can tell you what the best ones are, without even thinking. I mean the best for me, and I try to think for the greatest number of women. I mean by that, the lipstick that is best for the greatest number of women—the easiest, the least expensive, the most satisfactory.

There is always the element of chemical change that occurs with some women when they use a coloring, either lipstick or rouge. In some it turns blue no matter what they use, until they strike just the right product. In others almost any stick holds its color.

I have found what I think will work out for a great many women, as the best stick for shine, softness, durability and assortment of colors to match complexions. It will not suit all women. Heaven forbid that I should attempt such a task—but, being a practical woman with just the ordinary amount of good sense, I beg you to try the two lipsticks I'm giving you today and if you don't like them tell me why and I will find others that suit you better.

If you want to know whete you can purchase any article mentioned in this column phone Mignon at The Constitution. Please do not write unless you live outside the city, in which case enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

ATLANTAN GIVEN RIGHT TO SUE FOR TAX REFUND

The court of appeals held Tuesday that M. C. Kiser & Co., of Atlanta, had a right to sue the state revenue commission for a $544 refund on state income taxes. The decision reversed a ruling of the Fulton superior court, which sustained a demurrer filed on behalf of the revenue commission.

The high court held that when a mistake was made the taxpayer had authority to sue for the refund.

In another case the high court upheld the right of a disabled World War veteran to operate a slot machine under the free license provision of the state law. The case was that of L. P. Smith against the city of Atlanta. The city contended that the store in which the machine was located was a partner in the venture and therefore a tax should have been paid on the machine. Smith, the court pointed out, proved that he carried the only keys to the machine.

CHESTERFIELD PROGRAM—Lily Pons will be heard in three lovely selections during her program with Andre Kostelanetz and his orchestra tonight from 8 to 8:30 o'clock, over WGST. The diminutive soprano has chosen Saint-Saens' "Rossignol de Parisatys," Scott's "Lullaby" and Benedict's "Carnival of Venice" as her selections. Kostelanetz will present the orchestra and vocal ensemble in "I Won't Dance" and in a medley of songs from the new Bing Crosby film, "Mississippi," comprising "Down by the River," "Soon" and "It's Easy to Remember." Orchestral features will include a current favorite, "Clouds," and a popular song of a decade ago, "The Girl Friend."

"PETER PFEIFFER"—Jack Pearl, one of America's favorite comics, will make another of his weekly appearances over WGST as Peter Pfeiffer, harassed proprietor of the Family Hotel, singing master and philosopher, tonight from 9 to 9:30 o'clock. Jack's faithful henchman, Cliff Hall, will be present, equipped with a plentiful outlay of polysyllables to puzzle Peter.

HOWARD BARLOW — Ernest Hutcheson, distinguished pianist, will be the guest artist of "Columbia's Concert Hall" with Howard Barlow and the Columbia Symphony orchestra to be broadcast over WGST from 9:30 to 10 o'clock tonight.

LUNCHEON GIVEN HERE BY CHAMELI PRESIDENT

Well-known leaders in social and civic organizations attended a luncheon given by Vasser Woolley, president of Chameli Corrective Cosmetics in Davison's restaurant Monday. Kits containing the new, improved Chameli preparations were presented to all guests. These preparations, now on sale at Davison-Paxon's, are a Georgia product, from start to finish—made in Georgia, of Georgia products and designed for protection of complexions in southern climates—particularly that of Georgia.

Chameli, a nationally-known company, with firms in each section of the United States making beauty preparations compounded to meet the needs of complexions in the particular climate, selected Atlanta as the logical southern city in which to locate its plant because of the brilliant future of Atlanta and the obvious convenience of its location for distribution.

The improved Chameli is a product of two years of scientific research and experiment, with formulas derived with the collaboration of Dr. Samuel Guy, of Emory University; Dr. Paul Seydel, counsellor of the American Chemical Society, and Miss Florence Wall. Use was made of the discovery by a famous scientist of a process by which vegetable oils may be activated. All materials used are of the highest grade-certified to the United States Department of Agriculture.

Mr. Woolley was assisted in entertaining his guests by his mother, Mrs. Vasser Woolley; his sister, Mrs. Paul Seydel, and his aunt, Mrs. Lamar Rutherford Lipscomb. Those invited for this occasion were Mrs. William P. Dunn, Mrs. Katherine Conneratt, Mrs. William D. Ellis, Mrs. Stacy E. Hill, Mrs. Max Land, Mrs. Fannie Durand Williams, Mrs. Hugh Richardson, Mrs. L. D. Lewman, Mrs. William T. Healey, Mrs. Robert C. Alston, Mrs. Thomas K. Glenn, Mrs. Ewell Gay, Mrs. Edward Archer, Mrs. E. B. Craft, Mrs. Edward Van Winkle, Mrs. Rix Stafford, Mrs. Robert Hunt, Miss Nan duBignon, Miss Gertrude Land, Miss Lucy Cobb Brown, Miss Yolande Gwinn and others.

MAYONNAISE MAKERS HEAR CODE OFFICIAL

At the Atlanta Biltmore hotel Tuesday leading manufacturers were addressed by A. C. Sharpell Jr., of New York, assistant to the managing agent of the National Code Authority, and were urged to assist in a general investigation of the south to eliminate substandard mayonnaise and salad dressing.

A paste of flour and water, resembling in appearance both mayonnaise and salad dressing but devoid of legal oil and egg content, is being offered to the public, sometimes labeled salad dressing and other times simply labeled dressing," according to Mr. Sharpell.

Such products are prohibited by the mayonnaise code as deceiving to the consumer from a standpoint of quality, flavor and nutritional value. They are in fact so poor that no reputable manufacturer would consider manufacturing them.

In the past several months, 86 violations of the code have been reported to the code authority. In all but a very few instances, such products were made by new "fly-by-night" firms and, in addition, are distinguishable by ridiculously low prices made possible by eliminating a considerable portion of the nutritious oil and egg, which have made mayonnaise and salad dressing the great favorites of the public.

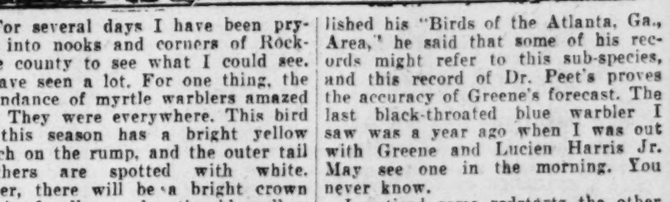

Grocers are warned to subject such unknown, cheap merchandise to a laboratory analysis before purchasing. Housewives are urged to select their merchandise, carefully buying the products of reliable manufacturers and from reliable grocers; also to beware of ridiculously cheap prices.

Mr. Sharpell pointed out that the stable brands are today sold at a very low level, considering raw material costs, and give unusual values at present prices.

The manufacturers present were assured that the code authority would prosecute these substandard cases when determined, to the full extent of the law.

Cary Grant Divorced By Virginia Cherrill

LOS ANGELES, March 26.—(AP) Virginia Cherrill, of the movies, was granted an interlocutory decree of divorce here today from Cary Grant, leading man of the films.

For several days I have been prying into nooks and corners of Rockdale county to see what I could see. I have seen a lot. For one thing, the abundance of myrtle warblers amazed me. They were everywhere. This bird at this season has a bright yellow patch on the rump, and the outer tail feathers are spotted with white. Later, there will be a bright crown patch of yellow and noticeable yellow on the sides of the breast. The back and all the upper parts for that matter are grey with a slight blue cast, streaked with blackfish. There are two white wing bars.

The subject of warblers brings to mind an interesting bit of information sent to me from the University of Michigan, where Dr. Max Peet, the famous brain surgeon, does his work. His work, let me say, consists of practising and teaching brain surgery all day and studying ornithology all—well, almost all—of the night. Dr. Peet is anxious to have a representative collection of American birds and purchased desired specimens from dealers. He bought a warbler, or rather a pair, from a Georgia dealer not long ago, which proved to be Cairn's warbler. Now this race is so closely related to the black-throated blue that field identification is almost impossible. When Earle Greene published his "Birds of the Atlanta, Ga., Area," he said that some of his records might refer to this sub-species, and this record of Dr. Peet's proves the accuracy of Greene's forecast. The last black-throated blue warbler I saw was a year ago when I was out with Greene and Lucien Harris Jr. May see one in the morning. You never know.

I noticed some redstarts the other day, too. They are among the daintiest of our birds. Like the robin, they are so much like the European bird that they have the same name but are really of different families. The male, you know, is that little black bird with the pattern of red on the wings and tail. The tail pattern is most distinctive, being red on the sides and ending abruptly near the tip, so that the bird might be said to be followed about by a black T.

Along with a big bunch of myrtle warblers I saw two ruby-crowned kinglets. These are smaller than the warblers and are next I believe, to the humming birds in order of small size. They are dull olive fellow, with a brilliant crown stripe of red. They are active little fellows, flitting out a few inches from the end of a twig and returning at once to the same perch. Their little twitching note is amusing.

Military Splendor Characterizes Robertson-Duncan Wedding Rites

LIEUTENANT AND MRS. GEORGE T. DUNCAN.

A fashionable assemblage of friends, relatives and guests from a distance assembled Tuesday evening in the name of Miss La Trelle Robertson, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Armand De Rossett Robertson, and Lieutenant George T. Duncan, United States Army, whose marriage was solemnized at 8:30 o'clock at the First Baptist church. Military splendor characterized the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. Dr. Samuel McPheeters Glasgow, pastor of the Independent Presbyterian church of Savannah, assisted by the Rev. Dr. J. Sprole Lyons, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Atlanta.

The interior of the church presented a scene of floral beauty as arranged for the nuptials. Tall palms and giant ferns were massed across the rear of the choir loft, and standing in relief against the background of foliage was a series of seven-branched cathedral candelabra holding white waxen tapers. A mound of white snapdragons, white stocks, and Easter lilies adorned the altar, and flanking either side of the altar were floor standards topped with sloping seven-branched candelabra. The bridal couple knelt for their vows on a white satin prie-dieu, caught with clusters of Easter lilies.

Dr. Charles Sheldon, organist of the church, rendered a program of wedding music, his selections including "Evening Star," from Wagner's "Tannhauser;" "Cantilene Nuptiale," by DuBoise; "Liebestraum," by Lizst, and "I Love You," by Grieg.

Wedding Personnel.

Miss Catherine Coates acted as the bride's maid of honor. She was an attractive figure wearing a gown of peach-tinted lace over a foundation of peach satin. The sleeveless bodice, cut in a deep V in front and in the back, was caught with handsome rhinestone clips. The fitted skirt, flaring into soft fullness below the knees, was featured by a lace panel in the back which extended into a train. Completing the effective costume was a bouquet of talisman roses and bronze snapdragons, tied with bronze satin ribbons.

Miss Dorothy Dean was the lovely young junior bridesmaid, her mother, Mrs. Ewing Dean, having served as maid of honor for the bride's mother, Mrs. Robertson on her wedding day. Miss Dean wore for the occasion a charming frock of Nile green silk net posed over taffeta of the same shade. The bodice was fashioned with a drop shoulder and finished with a tailored collar edged in narrow net ruffles. The form fitting skirt flared below the knees and was finished with double ruffles of net from knee-length to the floor. A tailored belt of net over taffeta was fastened with a rhinestone buckle. A graceful bouquet of bronze snapdragons and talisman roses tied with bronze satin ribbons, completed her costume.

Acting as ushers were a group of United States army officers who wore full military uniform and included Lieutenant David Hedekin, Lieutenant Crump Garvin, Lieutenant Thomas Beck, Lieutenant Harry Porter, Lieutenant Frank Johnston and Lieutenant Richard Torovsky.

Bride Enters.

The beautiful young bride entered the church with her father, Armand De Rossett Robertson, who gave her in marriage, and they were met at the altar by the bridegroom and his best man, Lieutenant Scott Sanford.

Lustrous antique satin, combined with peau d'ange lace, fashioned the exquisite bridal robes, which were especially becoming to the petite brunet beauty of the bride. The gown was closely fitted to her slender figure and worn with a modish lace jacket featuring long sleeves and the becoming high neckline. The back of the jacket extended into a long lace train, which fell in soft folds over the satin. The tulle bridal veil was attached to the bride's dark hair by a close-fitting cap of duchess lace, which was used by her mother on her wedding gown. The cap was caught over each ear with tiny clusters of orange blossoms. Her only ornament was a handsome diamond and pearl necklace, which formerly belonged to the bride's great-great aunt, the late Mrs. S. O. Smith.

Completing the beautiful bridal ensemble was a shower bouquet of white Killarney roses and valley lilies.

As the bride and bridegroom turned to leave the church they passed beneath an arch of crossed sabers formed by the ushers, presenting an impressive tableau.

The bride's mother, Mrs. Robertson, was handsomely gowned in shimmering satin of a blush rose tone, the fitted skirt extending into a slight train. A satin rose adorned the front of the bodice and on her shoulder was a cluster of purple-throated orchids.

Mrs. R. H. Duncan, of Montgomery, Ala., mother of the bridegroom, chose a costume of black lace, posed over black chiffon. Her flowers were a cluster of fragrant gardenias.

Mrs. John Hazlehurst, of McDonough, maternal aunt of the bride, wore marine blue lace over taffeta of the same shade, offset with a spray of red rosebuds.

Mrs. Eugene Avery, of Montgomery, sister of Lieutenant Duncan, was an attractive figure wearing aquamarine crepe. Another sister, Miss Martha Duncan, of Montgomery, wore a becoming gown of white moire, with facings of geranium red.

To Reside at Fort.

Lieutenant Duncan and his bride left for a wedding journey to Washington, D. C. Upon their return they will take possession of their quarters on the reservation at Fort McPherson.

Mrs. Duncan chose for traveling a smart suit of dawn blue Forstmann's woolen in a basket weave. Worn with a white crepe blouse, the coat was collared and cuffed in luxurious fox fur, dyed to match the shade of the suit. Her dawn blue felt hat was banded in navy blue and the ensemble was completed with navy accessories.

The guests from a distance who attended the marriage included Mr. and Mrs. J. Miller Robertson, Paul Robertson, Dr. and Mrs. J. Righton Robertson, Heard Robertson, Mr. and Mrs. John Moore, Andrew Perkins, Mrs. Hinton Baker and Mr. and Mrs. James Lawrence Robertson, all of Augusta; Giles Hardeman, of Macon; Mr. and Mrs. John Hazlehurst, of McDonough; Miss Rosa Carson, of Savannah; Miss Patsy Woodroof, of Newnan; Frank Dudley, of Athens; Miss Kathleen Colley, of Washington, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Duncan, Miss Martha Duncan, Paul Duncan and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Avery, all of Montgomery.

Miss Pringle Hostess.

Brown—Lindsay.

TENNILLE, Ga., March 26.—A marriage of interest to friends and relatives in Washington county, where the bridegroom has always lived and where he has a wide family connection was that of Miss Carrie Brown, of Tennille, and Raymond Lindsay, of Tennille, which was solemnized Thursday afternoon here with Rev. J. C. Saville, pastor of the Tennille Methodist church, officiating.

The attractive bride was dressed in a blue silk crepe swagger suit with blouse of blond satin and her accessories were also of blond. The bride is of a charming personality and has made many friends since the family came here from Irwinton some time ago to make their home. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Brown.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Carlos Lindsay, of Tennille, and is a member of one of the pioneer families of the county. His mother was formerly Miss Lola Hartley, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Harris Turner Hartley, of Tennille, and he is a brother of Mrs. Jennett Lindsay Copeland. Mr. Lindsay and his bride will reside at their country home near here.

Crowder—McGee.

The marriage of Miss Beatrice Crowder and Fred McGee was solemnized Sunday by the Rev. Robert Lamkin at his home in the Colquitt apartments.

The bride was attractively attired in a swagger suit of mustard color, with blouse of brown silk trimmed with buttons to match the shade of her suit. Her hat and accessories were of brown. Mrs. Arthur French Jr., becomingly attired in a suit of blue, was the bride's matron of honor and only attendant. Arthur French Jr. acted as best man.

Mr. and Mrs. McGee will reside in Atlanta.

BRAVES EVEN YANK SERIES; RUTH SINGLES

Johnny Allen Is Victim of Fourth-Inning Uprising.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 26.—(AP)—Earle Combs was in the Yankee lineup for the first time since being injured in St. Louis last July but his presence failed to stop the Boston Braves from defeating New York, 4 to 3, and squaring the series at three games each today.

The Braves concentrated all of their scoring in the fourth with Johnny Allen the victim. A single by Babe Ruth followed by three successive bases on balls, another single by Ray Thompson and a long fly by Garrity went into the making of the four runs.

Ruth held down first base for five innings and at bat walked once and connected with one hit in three times at the plate. One of the Yanks' seven hits off Flint Rhem and Leo Mangum was a homer by Red Rolfe.

Score by innings:

Boston	000 400 000	4	9 1
New York	000 010 110	3	7 1

Rhem, Mangum and Garrity; Allen, Van Atta and Dickey.

GIANTS LOSE.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., March 26. (AP)—Earl Averill's ninth-inning home run climaxed a heavy-hitting contest today as the Cleveland Indians scored four runs in the final frame to defeat the New York Giants, 9 to 5, before a crowd of 2,000, including Governor Dave Sholtz, of Florida.

Averill also drove out a double and single in the Indians' 11-hit attack off Frank Gabler and Clyden Castleman while Phil Weintraub contributed a triple and three singles to the Giants' 15-hit offense off Clint Brown, Thornton Lee and Dennis Galehouse.

Gabler also got a home run off Brown while Campbell hit for a circuit off the Giant rookie hurler.

Score by innings:

Cleveland	010 120 014	9	17 1

C. Brown, Lee, Galehouse and Lytlak, George; Gabler, Castleman and Mancuso, Richards.

CARDS WIN, 25-18.

AVON PARK, Fla., March 26.—(AP) The St. Louis Cardinals and the Columbus Red Birds, of the American association, went on a batting spree in their exhibition game today, with the Cardinals finishing ahead, 25 to 18.

Bill Hallahan started for the world champions and was pounded for 14 hits and nine runs in five innings. Ray Harrel worked four innings and was whacked for 11 hits and nine runs.

Dizzy and Paul Dean are scheduled to pitch tomorrow when the Cards meet the Detroit Tigers.

PHILS BEATEN.

WINTER HAVEN, Fla., March 26. (AP)—The Phillies bumped against an old pal today and came back bouncing on the short end of a 4-to-3 score, their second defeat the hands of the Baltimore Orioles and their fifth loss in 10 starts.

The old friend was Reg Grabowski. On the Phils' pitching staff last season, he was on the mound today for the Orioles, and allowed his former teammates but four hits and one run in five innings, another ex-Phil, Bill Lohrman, let in the other two runs.

TIGERS WIN.

LAKELAND, Fla., March 26.—(AP) A free-hitting team of Tigers defeated the Rochester club, of the International league, in an exhibition game here today. The score was 11 to 1.

Manager Mickey Cochrane's recruits and reserves obtained 15 hits from three Rochester pitchers. Fred Marberry, of the Tigers, held the visitors to a single blow in five innings and Clyde Hatter, who relieved him, yielded only two in four frames. Cochrane did not use one regular in his starting lineup.

DODGERS LOSE.

ORLANDO, Fla., March 26.—(AP)—After getting away to a four-run lead in the second inning, the Brooklyn Dodgers finally fell before the Montreal Royals, of the International league, when a ninth-inning rally lacked one run of tying the score. The final count was 9 to 8.

Leslie Munns, who pitched eight innings for the Dodgers, was unable to hold the advantage as the Royals counted five times in their half of the third. The two teams went into the seventh deadlocked but Jim Ripple and Gene Rogers quickly put the minor leaguers in front with successive home runs and the Royals never were headed.

TRIPLE PLAY.

LOS ANGELES, March 26.—(AP)—In a game featured by a triple play in the second inning, Seattle's Pacific Coast league baseball club climbed on two Chicago Cubs pitchers for 20 hits to win a 14-3 contest here today.

The triple play came in the second inning when Fred Lindstrom trapped a pop infield fly, picked up the ball and stepped on third base to retire Gyselman. He then relayed the ball to first, catching Spindel. Cavaretta tossed to Woody English, who tagged Herman Pillette.

A'S BEAT BARONS.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 26.—(AP)—The Athletics rang up their third win in three starts today, but had to go 10 innings to do it. The Birmingham Barons were the victims, 5 to 4.

A single by Pinky Higgins, a sacrifice by George Caster and Eric McNair's second double in a row broke the 4-4 deadlock. The Barons rattled their tallies off Caster in the first and third innings before Vernon Wilshere took command of the hurling situation.

Capitol Club Shoots Today

The Capitol Gun Club will hold the regular Wednesday silver sherbet shoot today beginning at 2 o'clock. There also will be practice at the 16 yards for all wishing to shoot.

The Wednesday shoots are a very popular midweek event and are attended by splendid crowds. Visitors are welcome.

Secretary Jack Tway will be in charge today.

How far did they miss your ticket and mine when they reached into the golden drums and pulled out the sweepstake winners?

It would be interesting to know just how many ephemeral and ethereal castles in the air have been built on the most unstable foundation of a ticket in the sweep. The stories are out today.

Yet each year the papers carry the romances—a fortune here for one ticket—another fortune there. But the papers never tell of the millions and millions of holders who saw their castles in the air, their retirement to a farm in Florida or southern California, their stalking in and handing a resignation to the tough oversee—vanish into thin air and utter nothingness. Still, at that, I think it is a good investment—a month of dreams for a modest price.

They will race at Aintree, England, on Friday. It's a steeplechase, so called because years and years ago, a group of Irish hunters, sighting a church steeple across the fields, set it as the finish mark for a race.

It was across the fields—jumps over fences, ditches, streams—and so we have the steeplechase. The Aintree course, the most famous in the world, is a bit longer than four miles—with killer jumps and turns.

The biggest sweep, the Calcutta sweep excepted, is held on this race.

Sweepstakes are managed in this fashion; an unlimited number of tickets are printed, each with a stub attached. The price is usually equivalent to $2.50 or $1 in our devaluated dollar, depending on the importance of the race.

The big idea, of course, is to sell as many tickets as possible. If 2,000,000 tickets are sold at $2.50 each it means a gross pool of $5,000,000. From this is deducted expenses, leaving perhaps a net pool of $3,000,000. About 40 per cent is set aside for the winning horse. The other is divided.

The stubs are all put into a huge drum. Stubs representing each starting horse are in another. The name of a horse is drawn. And from the other is drawn a sweepstake ticket stub. This continues until each horse has been drawn. In some sweeps, of course, the money is so divided that a number of tickets may be drawn for each horse.

When it is done, say 30 tickets drawn, the other 1,999,970 tickets are destroyed. They are the losers.

It is all very illegal in this country. The sale of sweep tickets is illegal. Most of the tickets offered for sale are counterfeit. Save your money. The chances against you are too great even where it's legal.

PLUS $20, MINUS $200.

Bryan Grant's friends are laughing—and offering condolences—to Atlanta's national clay courts tennis champion, who tells this story on himself.

Last summer, in addition to playing in the amateur tennis tournament, held in Atlanta, Grant also was out selling tickets, beating the drums and otherwise trying to develop interest in the week's play.

He went to the office of one of those financial "wizards" and sold him a box seat to the tournament for $20.

The man was most pleasant. He started talking. He asked Mr. Grant to have a seat.

He turned on the heat as our tennis champion sat entranced.

When Mr. Grant left the office, weak and exhausted, he had the $20 for the tennis tournament box but he was shy $200 of his own money, having invested that much in the wizard's company.

The gendarmes now are searching for the wizard. And stockholders, among whom is our Mr. Grant, hope to get back as much as two or three cents on the dollar.

"That guy," says Mr. Grant, "could have sold bathing suits to eskimos."

THE WEEK-END WHIRL.

A gentleman called yesterday afternoon and said he was slightly dizzy trying to figure out the athletic schedule for the week-end and would we please do something about it as to time, place and so on.

The schedule, which indicates in some slight measure just what a fine sports town our town really is, goes in this fashion:

FRIDAY.

Pro-amateur golf matches, Capital City Club, 2 p. m.
Emory vs. Davidson, golf, at East Lake, in afternoon.
Tech vs. Duke, golf, at East Lake, in afternoon.

SATURDAY.

Start Atlanta Metropolitan golf tournament, Capital City, 9 a. m.
Emory vs. Duke, golf, at East Lake, in afternoon.
Baseball, Atlanta vs. Athletics, Ponce de Leon park, 3 p. m.
Skeet shoot at Capitol Club, beginning at 2 p. m.
Tech vs. Davidson, golf, at East Lake, in afternoon.

SUNDAY.

Final rounds Metropolitan open, Capital City Club.
Baseball, Atlanta vs. Athletics, Ponce de Leon park, 3 p. m.
Skeet shoot at West End Club, beginning at 9 a. m.
Tilden tennis troupe, Biltmore courts, 2 p. m.

Baseball (with the return of the Crackers), the tennis exhibition and the Atlanta open tournament, stack up as the three really first-rate attractions over the week-end.

CONNIE MACK'S CLUB.

Connie Mack's Athletics, still a real attraction despite the fact they are not the dominant force they once were, will be one of three major league clubs to play the local lots.

The Red Sox, resplendent with the gilt of Tom Yawkey's gold, will be one outfit and the Ruthless Yankees, and glad of it, will be the other.

A number of AA clubs will appear here against our local civic representatives. The Crackers will be a potent force at the gate if that outfield will start hitting.

Dave Harris' hitting in the exhibition games at Daytona Beach has been reflected in the conversation about our town.

If Eddie Moore is fortunate enough to have his pitchers and catchers clicking at the start he will pack them in from opening day.

CHEAP AT THE PRICE.

They had won $100 playing bridge. This bride and groom of a few months.

"Let's invest it in two shares of ——— stock," he said, "it pays 12 per cent."

"That isn't enough," said his wife. "This company I know about pays much more."

"I don't like it," he said.

"This time, just this once, do as I say," she said.

They did.

Indictments are out for the officials of the company she "knew about." It will pay two cents on the dollar.

From now on he can vote down any amendment.

It was cheap at $100.

GEORGIA NINE BEATS BUFORD IN OPENER, 9-6

Bulldogs Get 13 Hits Off Two Pitchers at Athens.

By Bill Ray.

ATHENS, Ga., March 26.—The Georgia baseball nine, minus the services of Charley Treadaway, star second baseman, showed surprising strength here this afternoon by defeating Buford 9 to 6 in the first exhibition game of the season.

Gathering 13 hits off of two Buford pitchers, the Bulldogs gave due warning to the Southeastern conference clubs that they had a hitting team on par with anybody. Captain Cy Grant, who was switched from third to the outfield this season, got three hits in four attempts, one of which was a triple and another a double.

ANDERSON HOMERS.

Then Harrison Anderson, the Marietta first baseman, stepped up to the plate in the third inning and knocked a home run over the center field fence, scoring Jordan Ennis. It was the first time in many a day that Georgia player had clouted the ball over the center field fence.

Grant got a second-base hit on a ball which bounced over the right field fence in what looked to be a certain home run.

Coach Vernon "Catfish" Smith was extremely pleased in the way that the ball club fielded and batted for the first game of the season. "They performed nicely considering the fact that we have had only two days' practice on account of spring holidays," said Coach Smith. Smith used Lefty Nichols, Frank Johnson and Julius Bishop on the mound for the victory. These three hurlers yielded 13 hits while the Georgia batsmen got 12 hits off the Buford pitchers.

WATKINS STARS.

Ward Watkins, substitute second baseman, played a nice game of ball. Watkins is playing in Charley Treadaway's old position since Treadaway has been ruled ineligible on account of scholastic difficulties.

Latest developments in the Treadaway case indicate that he will stand a re-examination in one of his courses to try eligibility.

AMERICANS GET 286 RACE PRIZES

DUBLIN, March 26.—(AP)—American ticketholders drew the lion's share of the Irish hospital sweepstakes today as Great Britain's new anti-lottery legislation cut contributions from across the Irish sea.

A total of 286 Americans were made certain of receiving 795 pounds 9 shillings 1 penny (about $3,975), each. Awards which will become 30,000 pounds, 15,000 pounds or 10,000 pounds where the tickets held are for horses running first, second or third in the Grand National to be run Friday at Aintree, England.

Tomorrow 10 winners of residual prizes worth 8,097 pounds (about $39,270) will be drawn, after which 1,600 prizes of 100 pounds (about $485) will be drawn.

The 16 ticketholders on the favorite horse, Golden Miller, included five Americans. Other favorites in the race are Thomond II, Reynoldstown, Tapinois and Castle Irwell, and Americans drawing tickets on these numbered, respectively, three, four, seven and five.

The prize fund for this year's drawing, the 14th annual one, was the smallest since 1931, gross proceeds being announced as 2,824,926 pounds (about $14,124,000), of which the prize fund is 1,680,979 pounds (about $8,169,000). At current exchange rates, the first, second and third prizes are worth approximately $145,900, $72,900 and $48,600.

Governor Vetoes Sunday Skeet

Governor Talmadge yesterday killed by veto a bill which would have permitted members of gun clubs or their guests to shoot at clay targets in Atlanta on Sundays or holidays, provided the shooting was not done within a half-mile of a church. Representative Bond Almand, of Fulton county, was author of the bill.

Six-Day Bike Races Off; Promoter 'Departs'

Creditors and Employes Left Holding Bag for Near $2,000—Checks Bounce.

By Ralph McGill.

It seems that the six-day bike race promoter, registered as Millard Luen at one of our local hostelries, where a bill of about $400 remains to be paid, got on his bike yesterday, so to speak, and rode away from our town.

The six-day bike race was scheduled to begin Friday night. Carpenters were to start work last night following the wrestling matches at the auditorium and construct the circular track.

Now, it is made known we are to be spared the doubtful joys of watching a six-day race of the type which might have been presented here. Three sheets and ads announced first-class riders. When Luen had left yesterday it was learned the riders were not under contract. A telegram arrived, according to one of the creditors, asking for guarantee money.

IT'S ALL OFF.

It's all off. There will be no races. Checks marked with an emphatic "NG" came bounding back from the banks as day was done yesterday and the startled creditors met in the spacious offices rented by the promoter.

The word that he had, so to speak, taken it on the lam, got around quickly and the creditors gathered. They figured debts to the amount of about $1,400, including printing, rental, salaries due the unfortunate men who had taken jobs, and other expenses. To this must be added approximately $400 for the hotel bill.

Even as they met yesterday two grim-faced tradesmen entered the offices with the rubber checks which had bounded back from the bank yesterday. It is possible today will bring forth others.

According to the tickets on sale and to the original announcement, the Atlanta American Legion Post No. 1 was sponsoring the races for Luen. "Under auspices American Legion Post No. 1," read the tickets. It is understood the Legion was to get a percentage of the profits, if any.

"I'M NO ANGEL."

The creditors, excepting a few who left to put the matter into the hands of the police, began to search around for an "angel" in Atlanta. But Atlanta seemed to be completely devoid of "angels." In fact, there seemed to be an entire disregard of the chance to become an "angel." Those with money, who were approached, seemed to prefer to wait until Gabriel blows his horn and take a chance on the angel business at that time rather than become one today.

After a fruitless hunt for "angels" the creditors gave it up and will take other channels in an effort to obtain their money.

Luen had taken large offices in an uptown building; taking quarters recently occupied by a coffee shop.

In a letter left for the American Legion officials, Luen said he had no money to carry on, that he had been locked out of his hotel and his baggage retained and that he was forced to leave town.

"WORD OF HONOR."

He promised to try and obtain some money to pay off his creditors if he came across any money in the future. He promised this on his "word of honor." The creditors announced the banks could not accept this.

Unless the checks and hotel bill are paid warrants will be issued for him. The business firms who let him have printing, advertising and other goods do not have that recourse.

Those who had been working with Luen said he was depending on a financial "angel" in New York who had deserted him.

At his hotel it was learned that the man mentioned as his "angel" had come to Atlanta, looked over the situation and checked out last week.

ROOKIES ALMOST GO TO PIECES, BUT HOLD ON

Kelley Works First Five Innings and Looks Very Good.

By Jimmy Jones.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., March 26.—While these exhibitions don't count in the Southern league standings—sometimes we wish they would—it's pretty nice to win them after all.

Today the Crackers won their third straight in the Florida campaign, this time taking the Minneapolis club of the American association, a heavy hitting outfit which usually figures in the pennant race out there, by the score of 7 to 6.

For a time it seemed that the Crackers were going to duplicate the performance at Orlando last Saturday, which peeved the boys no little even if it was only an exhibition.

EARLY LEAD.

The regulars stepped out and combed Ray Starr, an ex-Cardinal, and old "Rosy" Ryan, who used to pitch for John McGraw back in the early twenties, for a 6-1 lead in the first five innings.

Then most of the regulars retired for the afternoon and turned the field over to the rookies, which, considering that Donie Bush, the Minneapolis manager, left his first team in there, was equivalent to casting the Christians to the lions or sending the Dionne quintuplets forth to debate with Huey Long.

The Cracker rookies managed to make a thrilling game out of what appeared to be a breeze against the double "A" outfit. They actually had Eddie Moore bearing down on the bench, figuring out ways to win it.

GOOD RELIEF WORK.

But thanks to a nifty job of relief pitching by Al Williams, the tall rookie from Texas, and a ninth-inning double by Jimmy McCaskill, the young catcher who belongs to the Yankees, they managed to pull it out of the fire.

McCaskill, subbing in left field for Paul Easterling, doubled to open the ninth, advanced to third on Wayne Black's single and scored on a wild pitch by Tauscher, who had relieved Ryan in the eighth.

Harry Kelley, the old maestro, worked the first five innings against the Millers and allowed five hits and

Pitching Staff Holds Fate of St. Louis Cardinals in '35 Race

'COCKY' CARDS FACE BIG JOB TO KEEP TITLE

Dizzy and Daffy Are Only Dependable Hurlers on Staff.

By Edward J. Neil.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

BRADENTON, Fla., March 26.—(AP)—It's an old sporting axiom—you can't go wrong sticking to the champions until you see somebody beat them, and right now the champions of everything in baseball are the almost unbelievable Dean boys and their supporting cast, the St. Louis Cardinals.

But there's one haunting element in the picture as the major league clubs, one by one, break their training camps and head home for the long grind of the regular season. That's the growing suspicion that the Cardinals just might not bother to let anybody beat them in the National league race this year; might in fact beat themselves, just as the world champion Giants of 1933 did last year when they personally opened the World Series gates to St. Louis.

The Cards are cocky, maybe too cocky, and Manager Frankie Frisch has had his hands full this spring convincing his scrappers that they are going to have to do more than sharpen their spikes and toss their war clubs into the arena to hold the title from the vastly improved Giants, the Cubs, and Pirates.

YOUTH AND POWER.

There's no question the all-round power, youth, and fighting spirit of the club that swamped Detroit when it had to in the final game of the World Series. But there is serious doubt that the pitching staff that performed so brilliantly against Mickey Cochrane's flabbergasted crew—the brothers Jerome Herman (Dizzy) and Paul (Daffy) Dean—can hold out through an entire season without more hurling support than the roster shows right now.

Aside from the fact that they won between them all four Cardinal victories over Detroit, the importance of the Deans show up mightily in the figures for 1934. Between them they won 49 games for the Cards, 30 for Dizzy, 19 for Daffy, and all told they participated in 89 of their 154 scheduled contests. They were "hot" when they were needed most. They must stay that way if the Cards are to be within striking distance of the top in September.

While Paul Dean, the quiet one, should develop this year into a 25-game pitcher, Dizzy hasn't looked any too well in training, getting shellacked particularly by the Giants, his cousins last year, and the rest of St. Louis pitchers now are noted chiefly for their longevity.

LITTLE DIFFERENCE.

Pat Malone, the fireball right-hander who came from the Cubs in exchange for Texas Jim Carleton, won 14 games last year. Carleton accounted for 16, and on paper the Cards haven't profited there. Wild Bill Hallahan, still erratic, is 32 now and should turn in more than eight victories, as he did in 1934.

There's Bill Walker, another southpaw question mark; Dazzy Vance and Jess Haines, none of whom can be depended on regularly, while the best looking prospect is Ray Harrel, a big youngster who won 13 games for Rochester last season.

Once past the pitching staff, with its overpowering Dean influence, the Cards can match anything else in the league in spades. Bill Delancey, only 22, has developed amazingly as a catcher and he hits around .320. The Philadelphia veteran, Virgil Davis, is a first-class slugging assistant.

Two additions, one the astonishing Charley Gelbert, fighting Leo Du-

TECH AND EMORY GOLFERS MISS PRO-AMATEUR

Players Hope To Participate in Metro, To Double Up.

By Roy White.

A busy week-end awaits members of the Tech and Emory University golf teams, as both keep engagements with North Carolina teams and also expect to participate in the second annual Metropolitan open championship tournament on the Capital City Country Club course.

Tech plays Duke on Friday and Davidson on Saturday. Both matches are scheduled for the No. 2 East Lake course.

Emory meets Davidson on Friday and Duke on Saturday and both those matches will be played on the Druid Hills course.

Both Tech and Emory players will miss the Friday afternoon pro-amateur tournament at Capital City and unless suitable arrangements can be made the Metropolitan open will also be missed.

PLAY IN MORNING.

Efforts are being made to play both the Saturday matches in the morning, so that both Emory and Tech players can participate in the Metropolitan open in the afternoon.

And it may be possible that members of the visiting teams will participate in the Saturday and Sunday Metropolitan open.

Charlie Yates, Tech's national intercollegiate champion; Berrien Moore Jr., John Ridley and Charlie Dannals Jr. had planned to play in the pro-amateur as well as the Metro, but with the Duke match on Friday they are staking all their hopes on an early Saturday morning match with Davidson and the Metro open in the afternoon.

George Sargent, professional at the East Lake club, had tentatively selected Crawford Rainwater as his partner in the pro-amateur, but Rainwater's Emory team plays Davidson and his chances in the Friday preliminary at Capital City are eliminated.

Sargent will most likely play with either L. R. Hunter, S. E. Gill, Frank Ridley, city amateur champion or Scott Hudson Jr. in the Friday pro-amateur.

HUGHES AND STEPHENS.

Julius Hughes, Atlanta's open champion, has selected his instructor, Harry Stephens, for his partner in the pro-amateur.

George Sherrill and Tommy Wilson, the Ansley Park professional, will play together.

Howard Beckett, the Capital City professional and host to the visiting professionals, will play with either Charlie Black Jr. or R. J. Bicknell, runner up to Frank Ridley in the city amateur championship tournament last year.

Jimmy Livingstone, the Ingleside professional, was not sure of his partner for Friday. Frank Ferst, Monle Ferst, Hobert Schwab and Elliott Haas are outstanding Ingleside amateurs who are likely to enter the Metropolitan open and the Friday preliminary.

Signs Up

JAKE GARDNER.

YANKEES SIGN JAKE GARDNER

By Roy White.

Jake Gardner former Decatur High and University of Georgia freshman baseball star, has signed a New York Yankee contract and will leave Sunday, for Norfolk, Va., a Yankee farm in the Piedmont league. Gardner was signed by Scout Johnny Nee and was highly recommended by Bill White, former University of Georgia coach, and now Atlanta baseball scout.

Gardner first came into prominence with Decatur High, when he was selected on the all-prep team from the city. After his first year at Decatur, the north Georgia interscholastic conference was formed and Jake was on the "star" team three years, an unusual distinction of having made the selected team four straight years.

During his freshman year at Georgia, Gardner was considered an outstanding outfielder.

After leaving Georgia, the Decatur boy played with Vienna in the Southwest Georgia league, and last year played with Douglasville in the West Georgia league. He was a teammate of Johnny Hill, a candidate for one of the Cracker outfield posts this year.

Gardner is the fourth Atlanta High school boy to sign a professional contract this year and the fourteenth Atlantan in professional baseball. The other new candidates are Jim Bagby Jr., former Boys' High pitcher, with Cincinnati; Ruben Tucker, southpaw pitcher from University School for Boys, and "Red" Borum, Boys' High shortstop, both seeking places on the Jackson, Miss., team.

ORCUTT, VARE MEET DEFEAT IN FIRST ROUND

Two Veterans Lose at Augusta; Jean Bauer Breezes Along.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 26.—(AP)—Two veterans of the fairways, Glenna Collett Vare, of Philadelphia, former national champion, and Maureen Orcutt, of Englewood, N. J., fell by the wayside today in the opening round of the fifth annual Augusta woman's invitational golf tournament.

Aside from the elimination of the favored eastern stars in startling upsets, the first day of match play was featured by the progression of other outstanding competitors, including Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., the defending champion.

The 18-year-old Virginia state champion, Lilly Harper, of Norfolk, came through with a stunning 4-and-3 triumph over Miss Orcutt, increasing her margin on the final nine holes after possessing a one-up advantage at the half-way mark.

HOLDS HER OWN.

After running up a two-hole lead on the outgoing nine, Miss Dean Van Landingham, of Charlotte, N. C., held her own the remainder of the way to topple the Philadelphia club wielder two-up and advance to the quarter-finals.

Miss Bauer had little difficulty in conquering Mrs. Regnald Maxwell, of Augusta, 5 and 3. The defending titleholder held a three-up lead after nine holes.

In the quarter-final round tomorrow, Miss Bauer engages Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., last year's runner-up, who eliminated Edith Beggs, of Cleveland, one up.

NORTH, SOUTH TOURNEY BEGINS

PINEHURST, N. C., March 26.—(AP)—A field of 103 tomorrow will begin play here in the thirty-third north and south open golf tournament, one of the oldest fixtures of the country.

Virtually every leading figure of professional golf except Olin Dutra, the reigning open champion, is included among the entries who will seek the $1,000 prize money and the prestige which goes with first place in this long-established event. The 15 prizes total $4,000.

More often than not, however, the north and south has proved a springboard to prominence for some comparative unknown rather than falling to one of the recognized leaders.

It was the first major tournament victory for Wiffy Cox, for Paul Runyan, the present G. P. A. titleholder, and for Henry Picard, the leading money winner this winter after taking the north-south.

Johnny Revolta, of Milwaukee, topped the rest of the field in this afternoon's last tune-up round, firing a 68. Ky Laffoon, Denver, was even with the long course's par 71.

Runyan also had a 71. Johnny Farrell a 72 and Willie Goggin, San Francisco youngster, a 73.

Farrell played in a foursome with Willie MacFarlane, Tuckahoe, N. Y.; Harry Cooper, Chicago, and Denny Shute, Philadelphia. All were playing well and shot approximately par. Playing leisurely, they did not hole all putts.

Bobby Jones, was here for the tournament, but will be a spectator. He played a round this afternoon paired with Horton Smith in a best ball match against Runyan and M. B. Beach, of New York.

Runyan and Reach won, 2 and 1.

Jones fired a 72 and three-putted two greens, Smith had a 73, Reach a 78 and Runyan a 71.

After 18-hole rounds tomorrow and Thursday, the field will be cut to the low 60 players for the 36-hole windup on Friday.

Other members of the "Y" team include Marion Reese, Phillip Reed, F. M. Paschal, Charles Glazer and C. Ball.

Members of the Alliance team include J. All, H. Besser, S. Besser, S. Halloway, Lewis, Goldberg and Silver.

Bill Schmidt's 'Sailer' Comes 'Natural' to Him

Young Hurler's Fast One Has All the Boys Guessing; Kelley Explains It.

By Jimmy Jones

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., March 26.—When Bill Schmidt, the big boy from Berkeley, was pitching against Montreal Sunday, the hitters kept asking for a look at the baseball.

When hitters start calling for the ball, it it means that one of two things is in their minds. Either they think the pitcher is "cheating" or that they want to cover up their own bewilderment by pulling the stall.

Well, the Montreal hitters were stalling around and asking questions of the umpire when Schmidt was steaming them in there.

This was easy to understand because the Berkeley boy was bending the Montreal hitters into a lot of human pretzels trying to follow the elusive capers of the stuff that he served them.

And Bill Schmidt wasn't cheating. He was only pitching naturally.

The boy has what is known in the baseball vernacular as a "sailer." It is not a curve, but a fast ball that takes off at the plate. It simply veers away from a righthand hitter and into a lefthanded one.

ALL PUZZLED.

The writer sat close to the Montreal bench and heard the players talking about it to their manager, Frank Shaughnessey.

"I can't tell whether it is a curve or a fast ball," Benny Tate, the veteran catcher, said after going up to the plate, looking at three and returning disconsolately to the bench.

Harry Kelley, who is a walking encyclopaedia on pitching, had explained the secret of Schmidt's effectiveness previously.

"Last year, the first time the Memphis club faced Schmidt, we all thought he was a curve-ball pitcher. I had noticed that some of you writers had thought the same thing. Well, I began watching him closely and I learned it was his fast ball that cut those monkey-shines and not his curve ball. He has a curve all right, but his 'sailer' is the thing that gets the hitters out of there," Kelley pointed out.

The Montreal hitters were looking at Schmidt for the first time. Very few of them had heard of him. Naturally the "sailer" had them wagging their heads and talking to themselves.

JUST NATURAL.

We asked Bill Schmidt about the "sailer" and how he mastered it. We were amazed to discover that he didn't know anymore about it than we did.

"It just comes natural, I reckon," said the amiable rookie. "I don't try to throw it or put any extra pressure on it. I just hold the ball across the seams like a lot of other pitchers do to throw a fast one. Sometimes it doesn't sail or have anything on it, but most of the time it does."

Schmidt, incidentally, is content to let well enough alone and let the "sailer" follow its own peculiar bent through the air currents. He is afraid to start monkeying with it for fear it will refuse to sail at all.

He did say, however, that he had got the idea of the "sailer" from Johnny Babich, a pitcher now with Brooklyn, who went up from the Coast league last year. Babich had a sailer and was very effective with it. Young Bill was interested after seeing him pitch

CHEWACKI LOSES TO KARL DAVIS

Chief Chewacki, the old maestro of assault and battery on the wrestling mat, is a hard man to convince. For the third time here he met Karl Davis, big Ohio grappler, at the auditorium Tuesday night, and for the third time the chief was carried helpless from the ring and unable to return to finish the match.

Abie Rothberg, of New York, substituted for Pete Schue, injured in a match Monday night, opposing Joe Cox, the former Red Demon, in the semi-final. The Jewish lad was considerably outweighed, but showed plenty of skill before falling victim to Cox's rough treatment in straight falls. The first fall came in 22 minutes from a kick to the jaw and a body block. In the second, after a furious exchange, Cox heaved Rothberg from the ring and he was unable to get back in before the count was completed.

Tom Marvin, the chin-lock expert, and Jim Coffield went to a draw in the 30-minute opener. The Indian got his chin-lock twice, but both times Jim succeeded in getting to the ropes. Marvin was rough throughout the match, but was badly outwrestled and saved a draw only by a remarkable show of stamina.

There were plenty of antics in the main match. Davis caused Chewacki voluble anguish by stamping on his feet time and again, and the chief came back with a classy face-lifting job on the westerner.

The first fall went to Chewacki in 21 minutes with three flying headlocks and a body press.

Davis required but three minutes to even the match. Flying tackles got the chief groggy, and he finally ran into a terrific back drop, which, with some expert kicks that Karl took at his prone foeman, finished the show, and the chief, for the evening.

Another card was announced for next Tuesday night by Matchmaker Weber.

saying he was not interested in the promotion.

This six-day bike company was not connected in any way with the promotion which staged the six-day races in New York, where John Chapman, of Atlanta and New York, is the organizer. John Chapman has been a great figure in sport for more than two decades and his promotions have been above board and successful.

The outfit which attempted to promote in Atlanta apparently was operating on a shoe string and it broke yesterday.

Luen promoted a six-day race in Miami recently.

Some day the auditorium committee will learn to avoid unknowns and some day the boxing commission will learn to protect and support a promoter of the type of Henry Weber, who has been here for six years and established a reputation for fair dealing, sportsmanship, honesty and good citizenship. Weber is an outstanding example of what a promoter should be.

Commercial Admits Two More Teams

Kraft-Phenix Cheese and Black and White Cab Company entered baseball teams with the Atlanta Commercial Athletic Association Tuesday night at a meeting held at Beck & Gregg Hardware Company. The addition of the two teams has strengthened the league to eight clubs, representing the strongest commercial athletic organization in the city. This is the second season in baseball for the association and a heated race is predicted for the trophy awarded by the American Bakeries. Gulf Refining Company were the winners of the cup last season.

The membership of the association is as follows: White Provision Company, American Bakeries, Fisher Body, Chevrolet, Atlantic Steel Company, Gulf Refining, Black & White Cab and Kraft Cheese. The season opens April 13.

Braddock Designated Number 1 Challenger

NEW YORK, March 26.—(AP)—The New York state athletic commission today designated James J. Braddock, recent conqueror of Art Lasky, as its No. 1 contender for the heavyweight boxing championship.

At the same time the commission eliminated Primo Carnera, giant Italian, from the running for his refusal to agree to meet Braddock in another elimination contest.

Carnera, represented by his manager, Louis Soresi, took the stand that he is unwilling to fight Braddock unless the Madison Square Garden Corporation, sponsor of the elimination tournament, will post a $50,000 guarantee that the winner of the Carnera-Braddock match would ultimately meet Max Baer for the title.

This the Garden refused to do. Colonel J. Reed Kilpatrick and Matchmaker Jimmy Johnston represented the Eighth Avenue arena at today's meeting.

The commission advised the Garden to communicate with Max Schmeling, German heavyweight, respecting a match with Braddock, the winner to meet Baer. In the event Schmeling declines to fight Braddock, the commission said it would merely reaffirm today's decision naming Braddock its No. 1 challenger.

By FRANK MAC MILLEN.

NEW YORK, March 26.—(AP)—The drip, drip of liquidation appeared to be wearing down the morale of stock buyers today, and bids were scarce, except at concessions, especially in the rail shares.

Pressure was not heavy, but interest on the purchasing side was even lighter. Bonds did nothing to buoy sentiment, with the exception of United States governments, which were steady to firm. Secondary rail loans gave ground easily, with declines running from major fractions to 3 points in a number of issues. Wall Street's forebodings of yesterday concerning possible rail reorganizations, while not confirmed by anything specific in the day's news, were intensified by the number of poor February earnings reports appearing during the session. The better appearance of weekly loadings was discounted in many quarters as reflecting mainly the fears of coal buyers over possibilities of a strike in the bituminous industry.

Cotton Lower.

Leading commodities did their best to lend encouragment, but stock market operators would apparently have none of it. Cotton finished 5 to 25 cents a bale lower, while wheat and corn finished about steady. A number of minor staples, however, were able to make good progress. Bar silver advanced 1 1-4 cents to another new high since 1928, and rubber, hides and some others advanced.

As in the previous stock market session, the declining trend was accompanied by a minimum of turnover. Volume in the stock exchange was only 441,800 shares. The Associated Press average for 60 stocks was 0.4 lower at 35.7.

The worst break in belgas since post-war stabilization, as a cabinet thought to have liberal monetary tendencies was selected at Brussels, failed to upset the balance of the foreign exchange market and leading gold and sterling-bloc monies were about steady.

Lack of Enthusiasm.

Despite the lack of enthusiasm for equities the tone of corporate news was encouraging on the whole. Eastman Kodak's 1934 report appearing overnight showed share earnings of $6.28 compared with $4.76 in 1933, while America Radiator, Phelps-Dodge and Bendix were all able to report the conversion of previous net losses into profits last year. American Can declared its regular quarterly dividend of $1. Norfolk & Western confirmed Wall Street predictions by calling for redemption $35,000,000 of bonds not due until 1944.

A few leaders in the shore list receded from 1 to 2 points each, including Allied Chemical at 128, American Can at 114 1-4, Liggett & Myers B at 96, and Public Service of New Jersey at 23 7-8. Declines of major fractions appeared in American Smelting at 33 5-8, American Telephone at 101 7-8, Santa Fe at 37 7-8, New York Central at 12 3-4, and Pennsylvania at 17 3-4.

Brokers' Views

STOCK OPINIONS.

FENNER & BEANE—We believe that prospects are favorable for renewed strength for stocks over the near term.

BEER & CO.—The general market had the general appearance of impending recessions in the latter part of Tuesday's session. This suggest a possible test of last week's lows some time in the near future.

ABBOTT, PROCTOR & PAINE—Without some sudden development to revive interest stocks are likely to continue in their rut.

COURTS & CO.—The market sadly lacks stimulant and none is in sight at the moment.

DOBBS & CO.—The lack of interest in the market indicated by the very light turnover Tuesday was not unexpected, and it seems possible that there will be another day or two of dull markets with narrow fluctuations.

COTTON OPINIONS.

FENNER & BEANE—We may have a two-sided market until some of the uncertainties overhanging the market have cleared up. We believe, however, that its tendency is to do better on any favorable developments.

BEER & CO.—The trade is taking quick profits and we advise buying on dips for quick turns.

COURTS & CO.—Continued shrinkage in export and domestic demands resulting in stagnant trade leads to expect narrow movements and to suggest purchases only on easy spots.

HUBBARD BROS. & CO. TO DOBBS & CO.—The question still is whether the trade will be able to secure its end-season requirement without drawing upon government financed cotton, and the situation in that respect can be counted on to bring in buying on the declines. May Liverpool due 6.24.

GRAIN OPINIONS.

FENNER & BEANE—With continued firmness abroad, we look for more confident buying in wheat on moderate setbacks.

ABBOTT, PROCTOR & PAINE — The strength in the foreign situation which seems to be growing daily in the mainstay of our domestic markets where stagnation prevails. When our domestic position is considered along with the trend abroad prices should advance.

COURTS & CO.—Reappearance of foreign firmness increases the importance of weather developments which leads us to expect narrow trading markets for the present.

UNITED AIR LINES SHOWS LOSS IN YEAR

CHICAGO, March 26.—(AP)—United Air Lines Transport Corporation today disclosed a loss of $2,283,525 on operations in 1934, attributing $1,117,567 of the deficiency to the 90-day period during which the United States army carried the mail.

Further loss was occasioned by carrying mail at the reduced rates permitted when the work was turned back to private carriers, the report said.

The company reported passenger traffic had increased from 127,693 in 1933 to 147,139 last year.

By FRED G. WILLIAMS.

NEW ORLEANS, March 26.—(AP)—Cotton futures closed 2 to 6 points lower today ,after a session of desultory dealings and uncertain price movements.

The market fluctuated over a 30-point range, but little progress was made on either side of the trading, and the final gong showed May closing at 11.02, July at 11:05, October at 10.65 and December at 10.73. Spots were unchanged, with middling quoted at 11.34 in a quiet market.

The opening was a point or two lower on the easier tone in Liverpool, where it was reported that liquidation by a house representing far eastern interests had unsettled the market. But early losses were substituted for similar gains and the market crept up point by point until around noon net gains of 9 points were shown by active positions.

Dealings Restricted.

Trading fell off on the advance, however, and the afternoon dealings were restricted. In the closing hour a selling movement began that drove prices down around $1 a bale, but profit-taking and short covering checked the decline, and the market rallied from the lows, and closed with negligible price changes.

Early steadiness was attributed to price-fixing, and further talk about inflation, but as further good crop reports from throughout the belt reported favorable weather over a great portion of the area, a soft one developed and prices eased.

Senator Bankhead's latest pronouncement came in for considerable attention and was thought to remove any doubts about the loan policy of the administration on next year's crop.

Little Other News.

There was little other news that could be considered as a market influence during the day, and the majority of the trade is staying out of the market pending developments.

The spot situation continues to be very tight, and in some quarters was believed to be one of the reasons for the comparative firmness of the futures market.

Liverpool is due to open tomorrow 4 to 5 penny points down on New Orleans.

Port receipts 6,904; week 15,125; season 4,060,588; last season 6,815,268. Exports 6,511; week 29,365; season 3,521,383; last season 5,935,310. Stock 2,351,268; stocks on shipboard at New Orleans, Galveston and Houston were 61,260; last year 69,667. Spot sales at southern markets 6,701 bales; 5,468 bales last year.

SLIGHT LOSSES SHOWN IN NEW YORK FUTURES

NEW YORK, March 26.—(AP)—Cotton was irregular today with early advances followed by sharp reactions which were partially recovered in the late trading. Closing quotations were steady at net declines of 1 to 5 points.

Light early offerings were absorbed by trade buying and covering on reiterated reports of a very strong spot situation, but after showing net advances of 8 to 10 points. The market broke 29 to 30 points. Last prices showed rallies of 15 to 18 points from the lowest on renewed trade buying.

The break came at a time when the market was evidently without much support, and business was comparatively quiet during the greater part of the day.

Exports today 6,586, making 3,659,854 so far this season. Port receipts 6,409. United States port stocks 2,352,638.

By G. A. PHILLIPS.
Associated Press Financial Writer.

NEW YORK, March 26.—(AP)—Secondary railroad issues had another sinking spell on the bond market today which threw a scare into the entire corporate section. United States governments were not disturbed and ended a shade higher.

A combination of poor earnings reports for February and continued adverse weather conditions in the agricultural sections of the midwest proved fertile pastures in which unconfirmed receivership rumors thrived and grew big, despite the fact that principal roads so far reporting had larger car loadings last week than in either the preceding week or the same period last year.

United States governments enjoyed the largest turnover in several days but the demand and supply was too well balanced to allow of much progress. Several of the more active treasury issues got up as much as 6-32ds but the advances elsewhere were around 2-32ds and some ended unchanged. The new treasury 2 7-8s of 1955, were especially active and reached 101.3 before encountering some profit-taking and easing to 101.1, up 3-32d on the day.

Heaviest losers among the slippery rails were obligations of the Baltimore & Ohio, Atlantic Coast Line, St. Paul, Chicago & Northwestern, Erie, Delaware & Hudson, New York Central, Southern Railway, Katy and Nickel Plate, most of which were 1 to 2 or more points lower. Such high priced bonds as Santa Fe 5s and Pennsylvania general 5s also were inclined to sag but losses were confined to the fractional variety. The Associated Press averages of 20 rails declined .7 of a point to 78.0, a new 1935 low.

The Associated Press averages of 10 industrials declined .1 of a point to 92.5 and that for 10 utilities held unchanged at 87.3. The average of 10 low-yield bonds dipped .2 of a point to 109.8 and 10 foreign bonds averaged .1 of a point lower at 66.3.

A brisk advance in some of the South and Central American bonds featured the foreign section. German government issues were a bit soggy but private obligations of German corporations showed some improvement as did Italian and Polish government bonds.

Transfers aggregated $11,728,000, par value, compared with $8,279,000 on Monday.

Not What She Wanted.

DALLAS, Texas.—Raymond Goforth, deputy district clerk, admitted he couldn't do much for the Mexican woman who sent him a letter saying her husband had left her, leaving her with one child to support. "I want amonia from him," she wrote. Goforth figured she meant alimony.

By FRANGLIN MULLIN.

CHICAGO, March 26.—(AP)—Prices of grain futures averaged higher today despite the extreme dullness of the market.

Moderate buying influenced by higher Liverpool wheat prices gave the wheat here a bulge of about a cent soon after the opening, but profit-taking whittled the gain. Little speculative interest and hesitancy pending political and monetary developments in Europe hampered the trade.

With caution prevailing, wheat closed unchanged to 3-8 cent higher, May 93 3-4 to 93 7-8, and corn was 1 1-8 down to 1 cent up, May 77 7-8 to 78. Oats were unchanged to 1-4 higher, rye easy and barley strong. Short covering on stop-loss orders forced May barley up 4 1-4 cents to 67 3-4 cents per bushel, within 3-4 of the day's limit under trading rules.

Attention of buyers was directed to the fact that overnight rains in the Ohio valley and adjacent territory failed to spread to drouth areas of the southwestern wheat belt where moisture is needed badly. While the air was reported as full of dust in some sections of eastern Colorado and western Kansas, fewer reports of dust storms reached the trade.

New crop wheat and corn deliveries displayed more strength than did the near-by options although trade authorities paid little attention to the government announcement that spring wheat farmers would not be permitted to seed more than 75 per cent in excess of their base acreage.

Corn firmed with wheat although prospects of heavier fed grain importations continued as a weight on coarse grains. Messages said a cargo of east African flat white corn had been sold to go to the gulf and that four cargoes of Polish rye were sold to go to Albany.

Provisions were firm with grains and hog values.

Carrier Seeks Loan.

MERIDIAN, Miss., March 26.—(AP)—The Meridian & Bigbee railroad today submitted an application to Senator Hubert D. Stephens, director and member of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, for a $200,000 loan to be used in improving the carrier's "old road bed" from Meridian to Cromwell.

NEW BOND OFFERINGS TO REACH 4-YEAR HIGH

NEW YORK, March 26.—(AP)—Offerings of new bonds this week will establish a four-year high with additional securities being prepared for the market.

The total will be in the neighborhood of $150,000,000 with prospective offerings boosting the total over the $200,000,000 mark. The last week over that point ended April 10, 1931, when $294,373,000 in new bonds came onto the market.

Earnings.

NEW YORK, March 26.—National Sugar Refining Company of New Jersey reports for 1934 net earning of $604,998, equal to $1.04 a share on the capital stock compared with $1,347,090, or $2.33 a share in the previous year. Current assets of December 31, totaled $9,790,185, equivalent to 4.3 times current liability. During 1934 the company purchased $275,000 of Warner Sugar Refining Company 7 per cent bonds and spent $520,247 for property improvement, in addition to making the direct charge to operations of $472,519 for maintenance.

Market Outlook

by MAX BUCKINGHAM

(Copyright, 1935, by United Press.)

NEW YORK, March 26.—(UP)—A precautionary desire for cash slowly is driving trading interest out of the stock market.

This desire for cash positions is built up by the uncertainty prevailing in domestic and foreign affairs. It results from inability to determine a definite investment or speculative policy.

The consequences are markets such as occurred in today's five-hour trading, a total of 440,000 shares exchanged—an average of 88,000 shares an hour—with prices slowly drifting off to losses of fractions to a point. Although the market was lower, the sluggishness of trading made dealings inconclusive. The lack of demand for stocks was the outstanding feature.

LIQUIDITY OF STOCKS.

Recently market observers and advisers have suggested that 50 per cent liquidity of stock market accounts appeared advisable. This was based purely on the uncertainties which include:

Railroads—No relief in sight from congress or from freight rate petitions. Earnings still will not measure up to rising costs generally although some isolated roads are managing to pull ahead.

Utilities—An oversold condition prevails in most issues, according to some traders. There is hope that the more drastic features of the utility holding company bill may be modified. There is a demand, however, for lower rates nation-wide—and some fresh outcropping of municipal power plants—that do not augur too well for the companies.

Industrials—The trend of general business is no better than steady with some of the major indices, such as steel production, continuing to droop. Most traders believe some fresh indication of government approval of profit-margins will be necessary before industrial stocks again can assume aggressive market leadership.

INFLATION TALK.

Inflation—The talk has spread recently, but without any market reflection. Power of the inflation character of the Patman bonus bill was minimized with belief that the measure never will become law. House defeat of a test case on the Thomas silver (inflationary) amendment to the work relief bill further dampened inflation ardor. This defeat came after silver prices in London and New York had climbed to six-year highs on the belief that silver enthusiasm in the United States eventually would bring a lift in the price for newly-mined metal.

Foreign—The Belgium political situation, while bringing no market reaction, is sufficient to cause concern. The new cabinet is a "New Deal" organization. Devaluation of the belga is expected. Business concern is on what devaluation may mean, with thoughts of tariff reprisal and possible difficulties for France, Switzerland and Holland in maintaining the firm gold-standard position. The belga broke in foreign exchange trading and then firmed some before the close today. Meanwhile there was a little easier feeling with regard to the armament question after the Anglo-German conversations.

The result of these problems is that no one tonight could see reason for a pick-up in market activity, something considered necessary for a rallying movement. The slow drift downward beginning Saturday, from a technical viewpoint, was a logical development after the recent rise but the impetus for a new rallying movement is not yet apparent.

DIVIDEND OMITTED BY NAUMKEAG CO.

SALEM, Mass., March 26.—(AP)—For the first time in 35 years the Naumkeag Steam Cotton Company, which operates the Pequor mills in Salem, passed its quarterly dividend today.

Ernest N. Hood, treasurer of the company, in announcing the action taken yesterday, said that the board of directors decided to take no action on a dividend because conditions in the trade made it advisable to conserve the cash position of the corporation. The last quarterly dividend issued January 1 was $1 per share.

Not long ago an outstanding Georgia manufacturer came in to discuss plans for his will and trust funds

"I want you to handle everything for my family," he said. "For ten years I have been either Executor or Trustee for two of my former business associates and their families. This experience has taught me two things—that it is an imposition to place such a responsibility on any friend, and that since the cost of handling an estate with you is no greater, it is really much cheaper because of your broad experience in investments, taxes, etc." — Shouldn't you profit by this man's actual experience?

TARZAN AND THE FIRE GODS No. 27

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

"Your safari is already organized," said Orzedos. "The headman of the blacks will guide you to your rendezvous with my friend Boris Garetto. I must impose upon you the importance of secrecy. No white man must go with you. No one must know where you go!"

Jones nodded agreeably. He was willing enough to abide by these restrictions. After all he was fortunate indeed to have this opportunity for adventure and research—at a very handsome salary. Still—there was something vaguely mysterious about this enterprise.

Perhaps, he thought, his vague uneasiness was emphasized by the sudden descent of the eerie tropical night, with all its strange sounds pouring in from the jungle that skirted the town. "You will be ready to start tomorrow," Orzedos said. "Better get a good sleep."

With Orzedos' directions clear in his mind, Dr. Jones started out for the lone hotel that graced the town. But as he wandered along a dark street, lost in speculation concerning his forthcoming jungle trek, two ruffians crept out of the shadows and followed him!

Wounded Man Admits Lunchstand Burglary

A man who gave his name as William Hardy, 28, was being held by police Tuesday night on suspicion of burglary following his arrest early Tuesday morning by policemen who fired a fusillade of shots and wounded him in the arm and leg.

Hardy, who was arrested on Courtland street near North avenue, after he had refused to halt at the command of the policemen, according to police reports, confessed to having burglarized a lunch stand operated by Mrs. A. L. Daniel, at Ford place and Ponce de Leon avenue. He and a companion, who escaped, were carrying boxes containing canned goods and silverware when police ordered them to stop. The companion escaped.

Investigation by officers disclosed that the lunch stand had been burglarized.

Shortly after Hardy had been treated at Grady hospital early Tuesday morning, a man who gave his name as Malcolm T. Early, 26, living at Camp Fulton FERA, appeared at the hospital for treatment for an injury on his arm. He was arrested and held in connection with the burglary, but late Tuesday afternoon was released for want of prosecution after Detective J. J. Carter had investigated the story he told police regarding how he received the injury.

The excess of exports in February, the so-called favorable balance of trade, was $10,469,000, compared with a favorable balance in February, 1934, of $29,976,000.

For the first two months of this year the favorable balance was $19,699,000, against $66,490,000 in the first two months of 1934.

TENNESSEE SOLON ASKS CHAIN STORE TAX

N. C. Administration Forces Overcome Anti-Sales Tax Bloc.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 26.—(UP)—Chain stores would be taxed from 3 1-2 to 7 per cent of gross receipts by a bill introduced in the Tennessee house today.

The measure graduated the tax in ratio to the number of stores in a chain.

Administration leaders intended to reverse legislative custom by considering revenue bills before taking action on the appropriation measure.

Shelby county delegation presented three bills to aid the federal housing program in Tennessee.

One new measure proposed nomination of congressmen and state officers by the county unit system with a runoff primary and each county granted as many election units as twice its members in the lower branch of the general assembly.

American Bar Association standards were included in another house bill requiring three years in a law college and two in an undergraduate institution before a person would be eligible to take state bar examinations.

Senators rejected an automobile drivers' license bill and representatives passed a house bill requiring the state to bear all costs of providing for inmates of insane asylums.

RETENTION OF SALES TAX APPROVED BY N. C. HOUSE

RALEIGH, N. C., March 26.—(AP) Retaining the three per cent general sales tax and eliminating exemptions, the house of representatives today passed the biennial revenue bill on its third and final reading, while the senate was approving on first reading a measure to reduce the cost of automobile license tags.

Passage by the house of the revenue bill, estimated to raise around $62,000,000, was by a vote of 78 to 26, not including four pairs.

The action came after the lower branch of the assembly had voted 62 to 43 for reconsideration of its vote taken late Monday reducing the sales tax levy from three to two per cent. Five pairs were not included in the vote.

Senate leaders are anticipating a fight in the upper branch on the three per cent sales tax and for continuation of present exemptions on nine basic articles of food which were stricken out by the finance committee and the house.

The senate debated the reduction of automobile license tags before it adopted a compromise by Senator Johnson, of Duplin, proposing to set the rate at 45 cents per hundredweight with an $8 minimum. The present rate is 55 cents per hundredweight with a minimum of $12.50 and the roads committee had offered a bill calling for a 50-cent rate with a $9 minimum.

The compromise measure will come up on its second reading in the senate tomorrow.

The house will resume work tomorrow morning with the biennial appropriations bill and a heavy calendar facing it.

S. C. SENATE HEAD URGED TO WITHDRAW RESIGNATION

COLUMBIA, S. C., March 26.—(AP) The senate today unanimously adopted a resolution asking Senator John F. Williams, of Aiken, to withdraw his resignation as president pro tem.

The resolution set forth that senate action last week in voting to have Williams name free conferees on the appropriation bill appointed by Lieutenant Governor J. E. Harley "was prompted by many considerations other than a desire to override the president pro tempore in making appointments which by law and senate rule rightfully belong to him."

Affirming the right of the president pro tempore to appoint the free conferees, the resolution was adopted upon motion of Senator Jefferies, of Coolleton, who offered it with Senators Stukes, Wise and others numbering 45 in all.

The resolution set forth that among "considerations moving the senate to its action" was the desire to "do honor to the lieutenant governor, who is sick in a hospital . . . "and that failure to confirm his suggestions for conferees might be considered a reflection upon three worthy senators who had been suggested by the lieutenant governor for places on the free conference committee."

"The senate of South Carolina hereby affirms the right of its president pro tempore to act in the absence of the lieutenant governor and the senate wishes to express to Senator Williams its entire willingness to be governed by this salutary constitutional provision."

Senators then proceeded to pass a bill to establish a state board of examiners for registered nurses by a roll call vote of 26 to 14 and returned it to the house for concurrence in amendments.

The house sent the senate a bill to authorize the founding of junior colleges in districts with an assessed valuation of $1,000,000 or more when three-fourths of the electors of the district approve it.

MD. "MILK CONTROL" BILL NEARING FINAL STAGE

ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 26.—(AP) The much discussed "milk control" bill was moved up to the final voting stage on the house of delegates today in a quiet legislative day at the statehouse.

The milk bill carried 54 amendments, striking out most of the controversial features. The proposal with the amendments was given a favorable report by the judiciary and agriculture committees.

It provides for a control or arbitration board of three members, which will have no power in any marketing area or city unless requested by a large portion of the persons residing there. The state board of agriculture would appoint the members instead of the governor.

The senate, after recovering from its exciting session of Monday night, found 32 bills awaiting action. Most of the measures were local in nature. One bill, passed, authorized transfer of the property of the Cheltenham Reform School for Negro Boys to the Board of Public Works.

The house adopted a favorable committee report on a joint resolution, calling on the State Roads Commission to repair the present Philadelphia roads between Baltimore and Aberdeen.

By three rapid-fire votes early this morning—coming after four hours of bitter, and sometimes personal, debate—the senate reconsidered the defeated general sales tax bill, substituted it for an unfavorable committee report and sent it back to the finance committee.

The voting—by a narrow 15-to-13 margin on each issue—did nothing to clarify the relief situation. Three days ago the sales tax bill was in committee. With the current session ending April 1, the legislature must provide means of raising $5,000,000 to secure federal aid for relief.

Boy Scouts Protest Natchez Dog Laws

NATCHEZ, Miss., March 26.—(AP) A Boy Scout army, waving banners, today marched upon the municipal building to plead with the city fathers for a revision of the recently enacted dog ordinance and a more humane manner of enforcing it.

In the van of the line of march through the business section was a sturdy red-headed scout, holding in leash two dogs.

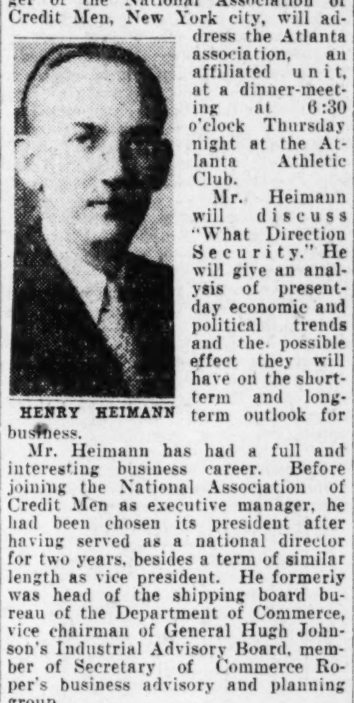

A large delegation of adult dog owners was on hand to give moral support, to the Scouts and their advocate, Senator Luther A. Whittington, former mayor, in the plea for an elimination of the section of the ordinance which directs the city dog catchers to shoot dogs that they are unable to capture. They also appealed for proper care of impounded animals.

The banners carried by the Scouts which were borne into the council chamber had such captions as "Man's Best Friend Is the Dog!" "Faithful to Death—the Dog," "Give Us a Humane Dog Ordinance."

A truce was negotiated. The city fathers agreed that while the collection of dogs would be continued the killing of animals should be stopped.

HENRY H. HEIMANN, CREDIT EXECUTIVE, TO LECTURE HERE

Henry H. Heimann, executive manager of the National Association of Credit Men, New York city, will address the Atlanta association, an affiliated unit, at a dinner-meeting at 6:30 o'clock Thursday night at the Atlanta Athletic Club.

He formerly was head of the shipping board bureau of the Department of Commerce, vice chairman of General Hugh Johnson's Industrial Advisory Board, member of Secretary of Commerce Roper's business advisory and planning group.

CONTEMPT OF COURT CHARGED DEWITT KING

R. DeWitt King, Atlanta capitalist, was cited Tuesday by Judge Hugh M. Dorsey in city court to show cause on April 19 why he should not be adjudged in contempt of court for his refusal to answer questions propounded to him before a court commissioner appointed to take his deposition in a $2,000,000 damage suit. King refused to answer the questions, bearing upon his loan company operations, upon advice of counsel.

The suit against King and others was filed several weeks ago by Mrs. Cora Wagner, Milwaukee society woman and stockholder in a chain of loan companies. The plaintiff charged King sought to buy her interest and when she refused to sell embarked on a campaign to harass and embarrass her. Among other things, she complained of articles published in a Louisville (Ky.) newspaper.

Rookie Pitchers Go to Nashville

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., March 26.(AP)—Two rookie pitchers belonging to the New York Giants, Norman Masters and Chester Klaerner, were farmed out to the Nashville Southern association club today.

Manager Bill Terry dropped the two men at the Vols' training camp here and borrowed Hal Stafford, young hurler, who will bear his share of the Giants' pitching burden during the exhibition game schedule. Stafford will rejoin his Nashville mates when the Giants stop there for a game early next month.

Masters won 21 games and lost 11 in the Northern league last season. Klaerner, a former college star at Rice Institute, is without professional experience.

Two Rookies Cut From Traveler Squad

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., March 26.—(AP)—Two more rookies went home today as Manager Doc Prothro planned long drills for his Travelers, in preparation for their opening exhibition tilt with the Milwaukee team of the American association here Sunday.

"Physically, the team is in good condition and coming along nicely, thanks to the ideal weather," Prothro said.

He issued releases to Paul Crow, from Lanett, Ala., and Walter Finney, Lafayette, Ind., outfielders. Further weeding out activities were planned later in the week.

Prothro has the assistance of Rube Robinson, former great left-hander of the Southern association, in developing Pitcher Zach Schuessler, southpaw regarded by the Peb pilot as quite a prospect.

Teaching Schuessler to "keep 'em on the bases" was Robinson's task. He said the southpaw showed improvement after his first lesson and had pretty good speed, a perfect curve ball and fair control.

Amateur Loop Organized At Athens

ATHENS, Ga., March 26.—(AP)—The Georgia-Piedmont league, a northeast Georgia amateur loop, was reorganized for the 1935 season as representatives of 10 teams met here last night. The league was first organized last year.

S. F. Burke, of Greensboro, was elected president of the organization, and W. R. (Bill) Cheney, manager of the Athens Sporting Goods Company, was named secretary-treasurer.

Teams which officially entered the league last night are Greensboro, Statham, Crawford, Bishop, Athens, Whitehall, Hull, Winder, Athens CCC Camp, and Eatonton. In the event two more teams enter, the loop will be divided into two divisions, with the winners of each section engaging in a playoff series to decide the league championship.

Opening date for the league was tentatively set for April 13. Games will be played only on Saturdays.

FLORIDA NINE LACKS HITTERS

GAINESVILLE, Fla., March 26.—(AP)—The 1935 University of Florida baseball team, judging by practice performances, will be strong afield but weaker at the plate.

Only one veteran infielder is on hand, and experienced players are lacking to plug the other positions. Coach Ben Clemmons, star 'Gator pitcher of a few seasons ago, is foregoing any predictions.

The team received its first blow during basketball season when Alternate Captain Spec Kinsey, counted the pitching mainstay, was forced out by an old back injury.

From a flock of right-handed aspirants Clemons must pick his pitching staff. Bill Ferrazzi, unable last season to do his best because of illness, has been whipping them past the plate in good style during practice. Pete Pennock has a lot of stuff on the ball.

Irving Tutt, Jack Bostwick, Tom Jackson, and Al Hickland are the other pitchers. Hiles, lone southpaw on the squad, probably will not get a starting call.

Ernie Priest, football back, is the infield's veteran. He plays third. Ken Thompson, the first baseman, won his letter in the outfield last year.

Leading shortstop candidate is Jack Clark, while Ken Eppert likely will hold down second. Both are newcomers.

Eddie Joe Long in right, Don Bridges in left, and Walter Carroll in center, make up the outfield. Bridges and Carroll are lettermen; Long is a new prospect.

Only behind the plate are the 'Gators blessed. Captain Jess Dooley hits well, and fields in top shape. So does Johnny Seay, Dooley's chief aid.

Florida Tankmen Win Over Clemson

GAINESVILLE, Fla., March 26.—(AP)—The University of Florida swimming team gained its eighth straight victory of the season today, defeating the Clemson College team, 43 to 41 points, in the university pool here.

It was the second time this season that Coach Frank Genovar's 'Gator Nators were forced to win the final event to gain victory over the South Carolina team.

SCHMIDT'S 'SAILER' COMES NATURAL

and got Babich to show him how he threw it.

"Babich showed me how he gripped the ball and that was all," Schmidt explained. "I was pleased when I learned that I could throw it, but other pitchers have told me that they held a ball the same way and that it wouldn't sail for them."

USED IT ON BABE, LOU.

It was with the sailer, incidentally, that Schmidt struck out Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig in consecutive order in an exhibition game with the Yankees in Atlanta last spring.

Ruth, you recall, asked to see the ball after whiffing at the third one, and said he had never seen one behave as Schmidt threw it. The Babe, too, probably thought that Schmidt was "doctoring" the ball, although he was thoroughly satisfied after inspecting it.

Southern league hitters found Schmidt equally puzzling. The boy didn't pitch a bad ball game all year. He came within two scratch hits of a no-hit game in mid-season and went on to win 17 games for the Crackers.

"Striking out Babe and Lou in a row gave me the biggest thrill of my career, I guess," young Bill declared.

Schmidt's temperament is the thing that makes him a pitcher—this and the puzzling "sailer." He never worries or gets flustered. He just stands out there with a sort of perpetual grin, chews gum and pitches calmly and effectively.

"You either do or you don't," is his motto.

ACCIDENT HALTS WOOD ATTEMPTS

boat under control after it struck the porpoise and the damage to the craft was comparatively minor.

He said he would install a new propeller shaft and propeller and probably would have the boat in condition for further test runs tomorrow.

"I'll bet I certainly scared that school of fish," said Wood, smilingly, as he came ashore. "I don't think I hit more than one, but about three of them jumped clear out of the water."

The Detroit motor boat racer said it probably would be several days yet before he would be ready to make an official attempt to better his own speed record.

Wood said he had been traveling at between 115 and 125 miles an hour today, and after slowing down for a short distance had started to speed up again when he sighted the school of porpoise as he started to round a slight curve in Biscayne bay. He cut the motors quickly, but could not avoid striking the fish.

The propeller and propeller shaft were torn away when the craft struck the porpoise, but otherwise the boat was not damaged.

Orlin Johnson, Wood's mechanic, was riding with him in the boat when the mishap occurred. Miss America was towed back to its docks for repairs.

CRACKERS WIN ANOTHER, 7-6

one run, this resulting in a couple of errors by Johnny Hill and Buster Chatham. King Kelley looked like a cool million out there today, striking out Joe Hauser, the association's home-run king and a left-handed hitter, twice.

"Whitey" Hayes, the likeable Alabama boy who is trying hard for a place on the staff, went in with the rookies in the sixth and got by fine as long as they gave him support. Then Eddie Moore's kid infield became a little jittery in the seventh. Young Al Kelley booted an easy chance at second on what should have been the second out and Hayes had a hard time getting the side out. "Dutch" Holland and Spencer Harris hit home runs before it was over, the Millers scoring four runs.

HAYES RELIEVED.

Williams relieved Hayes in the next inning after another error by Black and two hits had enabled the Millers to tie the score at 6-all, and pitched splendid ball the rest of the way, retiring Johnny Gill, ex-Chattanooga Lookout; Holland and Norris in a row after taking over the burden.

The showing of Williams today and Sunday, when he struck out five Palatka batters in two innings he worked over there, has Moore eyeing him seriously as a rookie prospect. Williams is 19 years old, six feet three inches tall and weighs 195. He has plenty of speed, a dandy curve ball and control. He may yet bob up with some competition for Hayes, Durham and Martin for one of those rookie pitching jobs.

The Crackers, although Starr was wild and walked the first four hitters to face him in the fourth, got only one run that inning, but in the fifth they went to town on "Rosy" Ryan, the ex-Giant, scoring five times on Joe Palmisano's walk, Kelly's single, Chatham's walk and successive singles by Manager Moore, who was playing second base today, Harry Taylor and Dave Harris, plus Paul Easterling's infield out.

ENDS DAYTONA WORK.

Today's game ended the Crackers' operations in Daytona Beach. They take a holiday tomorrow and on Thursday will hit the trail home, pausing at DeLand for a final game with Minneapolis. Jim Lindsey, Chester Martin and Bobby Durham will pitch Thursday, with Schmidt, Thomas and Nelson being saved for the game with Philadelphia in Atlanta Saturday, the club's first exhibition of 14 to be played at home.

The squad leaves for Jacksonville after Thursday's game by bus and will take a train there for Atlanta. What might be called minor casualties were suffered in today's game, although nothing serious. "Nig" Lipscomb pulled up with a Charley horse in the second inning and Manager Moore relieved him.

A collision between Brunner Nix and Johnny Hill, the third baseman, when both rookies went after a pop foul, shook the latter up some but he stayed in the game.

'COCKY' CARDS FACE BIG JOB

rocher for the shortstop berth after the calf and foot of one of his legs was almost shot away a couple of years ago in a hunting accident, have added considerable strength to an infield and outfield already mighty strong. Gelbert, always a picture fielder and steady hitter, is leaping around spryly again but Durocher has the call. Terry Moore, a fleet young Texan who hit .328 for Columbus last year, has very definitely taken over the center field job.

FINE OUTFIELD.

Powerhouse Joe Medwick, hero and goat of the World Series, is back in left field, a distance clouter with a .320 stamp on him. Red Worthington, formerly with Braves, is getting a real chance in right, where Jack Rothrock won a regular berth last season.

The infield as a whole outclasses anything in the league except the inner frontier of the Giants. Jim (Rip) Collins, with the arms of a blacksmith, is a .330 standout at first and there is still lots of spectacular baseball and .300 hitting in Frankie Frisch at second. John Leonard (Pepper) Martin, not hitting any more as he did when he personally tore the Athletics pitching staff apart in one world series, is still a fine third baseman with the spirit of a college freshman.

Frisch, more than anyone else on the club, knows where the danger lies.

"We're going to be up there," he says, "that is if the boys don't figure the pennant is already won. We've got to lick a lot of awful good clubs, and you can't do that on last year's records."

PITTMAN RAPS CRITICS OF PACIFIC MANEUVERS

'Misgivings' of Scores Are Without Grounds, He Asserts.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—(AP)—Chairman Pittman of the senate foreign relations committee today replied to those who hove protested the proposed American naval maneuvers in the Pacific this summer by asserting it was necessary to train the navy in the Pacific as well as in the Atlantic.

The Nevada democrat said he had received scores of protests, including one from Professor Kenneth S. Latourette, of Yale University, who expressed "very grave misgivings" over the fleet maneuvers.

Answering all through a letter to the professor, which he placed in the congressional record, Pittman said he entertained no such "misgivings." Some added emphasis, was given his statement, although no connection was intended, by the fact that Japan's withdrawal from the League of Nations is effective tomorrow, and many eyes have been on the Orient.

"In conducting the proposed naval maneuvers," he said, "it will not be necessary for our fleet to approach within 1,500 miles of the coast of any other country except Canada or Mexico, neither of which would be excited by the peaceful operations of our fleet in the Pacific.

"I know of no strained relations between our government and any other government that threatens war. There may be diplomatic differences that will ultimately require conferences and peaceful solutions, but I have no fear but that amicable understandings may be arrived at.

"The president of the United States longs, as no other ruler does, for peace at home and abroad. . . .

"There are jingoes in every country who, actuated either by political ambition or expediency, longing for power, or by unjustifiable fear, are constantly crying 'war.' Those who have duties to perform cannot afford to be affected by such jingoism.

"I say that, in my opinion, the committee on foreign relations of the senate, or the senate which it represents, having no jurisdiction over the operations of the fleet, would in no case attempt to interfere with or even advise the executive with regard to the operations of the fleet unless it clearly appeared that he was about to perform some act which would gravely threaten the welfare of our people.

"Certainly, no such situation exists by reason of the proposed maneuvers of our fleet in the Pacific this coming summer."

Townsend Will Run On Old-Age Platform

BOSTON, March 26.—(AP)—Dr. Francis E. Townsend, his personal representative said tonight, will be a candidate for president in 1936.

Captain Charles M. Hawks, representative of the author of the $200-a-month old-age pension plan, said the California physician would lead a third national party, with Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, as his potential running mate for the vice presidency.

Hawks said that should the Townsend plan bill be passed without substantial change by the present congress, a party committed to Townsend-for-president would be needless and would not be formed.

Hawks said the Townsend supporters would seek to combine forces with supporters of Huey Long and the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin.

Senator Borah's sympathy with the Townsend plan, Hawks said, was the basis for his prediction Borah would have second place on the ticket.

H. was accompanied by Charles S. Reid representing the Atlanta Bar Association, members of which have indorsed the proposal for an extra judge.

AGED MAN IS FOUND SLAIN IN ARKANSAS

SILOAM SPRINGS, Ark., March 26.—(AP)—Archibald Yell, 86, nephew and namesake of the early Arkansas governor, was found shot to death at his home one mile east of here today. A coroner's jury returned a verdict that he had been murdered by an unknown assailant.

Clad only in underclothes, the body was found on a walk at the rear of the home by a gardener employed by the aged man. Yell was shot behind the right ear, apparently at close range.

Investigators said the house had been ransacked. The victim had lived in retirement for many years and reputedly kept considerable money about his home, which he occupied alone.

A .45 calibre pistol was found near the dwelling. Deputy Sheriff Ivan Lafollette took finger prints found on household articles.

INTANGIBLES DROP ON CITY TAX BOOKS

Low Assessment Inducement Fails To Bring Taxable Property to Light.

With returns filed on less than $1,000,000 on intangibles, the intangible tax returns for Atlanta have dropped approximately $6,000,000 this year from the $7,000,000 listed in 1934, according to records in the offices of city tax assessors.

This record was revealed Tuesday by Joe C. Little, senior tax assessor, who asserted that despite a decision of the administration to assess stocks, bonds and other intangibles only 15 per cent of their market quotation as of January 31, 1935, which means they would be taxed only about 2.25 mills per dollar value, the properties have not been listed.

Leading Atlanta bankers assured Mayor Key that if the city would accept the 15 per cent valuation, they would urge their clients to file returns with the municipality, but it was said Tuesday that inability of the bankers to secure agreements with county and state assessors, had prevented any concerted co-operation.

The entire personal property digest of the city as of March 1, 1935, showed only $5,270,003, while the 1934 personal property account was $98,760,801, of which $7,000,000 were intangibles.

Real estate is valued at $246,135,293 on the 1935 books, as against $245,000,000 carried in 1934.

There, however, was a total in all properties of only $251,405,296 on the 1935 digest up until March 1, while $345,000,000 was the estimated digest carried in the January finance sheet. This leaves a deficit to date of $93,595,704.

The consideration which Key told bankers would be given their clients in accepting intangibles at 15 per cent of their market value has failed to place any intangibles on the books and instead there was a considerable drop. Just what will be done is a matter to be considered at conferences between Key and bankers, which it is anticipated will be held within a few days.

Key urged the council to accept the figures believing that several hundred million dollars worth of intangibles would be made available for taxation. The deficit probably will cause him to revise the agreement.

SPIRITED FIGHT SEEN OVER P. O. PAY ISSUE

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—Action of the senate today in adopting an obscure amendment to the postoffice department annual appropriation bill bearing on the payment of salaries of acting postmasters may lead to a spirited parliamentary battle involving members of the Georgia delegation.

The amendment, attached to the departmental supply bill before final passage today, provides that the funds appropriated cannot be used in paying salaries of postmasters who have either failed of confirmation or whose nominations were withdrawn before the senate acted.

So far as known, the only Georgia postmaster involved is Dr. Ed Tignor, of Milledgeville, but because his appointment was sponsored by Representative Carl Vinson, dean of the state delegation, and opposed by Senator Richard B. Russell Jr., there may be parliamentary repercussions when the bill goes back to the lower house for final approval.

The junior Georgia senator disclaims all responsibility for initiating the amendment, but the application to the Milledgeville postmaster is so pointed that Representative Vinson suspects it was aimed at him. The fact that Senator Russell is a member of the appropriations committee handling the bill in the upper chamber also figures in the situation.

Dr. Tignor's nomination was withdrawn from the senate last year after Senator Russell announced he would oppose confirmation. Subsequently Representative Vinson, whose home is also Milledgeville, succeeded in having the postoffice department name him (Dr. Tignor) acting postmaster.

Under rules and practices of the department, an acting postmaster may serve indefinitely with no opportunity given opposing senators to defeat confirmation. He gets the same salary, the only difference being in the title and the permanency of his status.

House members claim the right of naming postmasters in their own districts, and the ruse of circumventing senatorial opposition to confirmation of their appointees by having them designated "acting" has been resorted to in other states besides Georgia.

Whether Senator Russell conceded he had been outmaneuvered in the Tignor appointment is not known, but his friends say he has not felt kindly toward the postoffice for disregarding his opposition. Nevertheless, he insists that responsibility for the present amendment does not attach to him. Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, chairman of the appropriations committee, is said to have caused it to be inserted at the behest of other members having a similar grievance.

P. T. Anderson, serving as acting postmaster at Macon, comes in the same general category, but is beyond the pale of the amendment's provisions since his name has never been sent to the senate. Representative Vinson had him named in the same temporary capacity after Senator Russell indicated he might oppose confirmation.

Representative Vinson, a seasoned parliamentary head and regarded as one of the best "fixers" in the house, is expected to wage a determined fight to strike out the amendment when the bill is returned there. If Senator Russell seeks to have it retained by the upper chamber political fireworks may ensue.

2 MEN FOUND GUILTY IN MAIL FRAUD CASE

John Harbin Miller and William Thomas Frazier, operators of a brokerage house in Griffin, will appear before Judge E. Marvin Underwood in federal court Thursday for sentencing on charges of using the United States mails to defraud.

Miller was found guilty by a jury in the federal court Tuesday, while Frazier had previously entered a plea of guilty to the charge.

The pair were accused of having sold Angelos Genes, owner of the Baltimore restaurant in Griffin, stock certificates of the International Telephone and Telegraph Company which they had raised from 5 to 50 shares. The sale took place October 5, 1932, and the mails were used in sending the certificates. Genes did not discover he had been victimized until a few months ago when he attempted to sell the certificates.

Airman Finds Body Of Missing Executive

SENNETERRE, Que., March 26.—The frozen body of Stanley E. Siscoe, wealthy mining executive, missing since his plane was forced down in the wilderness a week ago, was found today near Lake Matchimaniton.

A Canadian Airways plane piloted by S. J. McRorie, who found the body, brought it into Senneterre preparatory to transportation to Montreal.

Siscoe and Thomas Wrathall, pilot, were forced down during a blinding snowstorm last Tuesday. Wrathall was found yesterday alive and in good physical condition.

He said he was unable to get the craft into the air again after the storm subsided. The two men then set up camp in a trapper's shack until Sunday when their food was exhausted. Siscoe set out for aid and traveled in a northwesterly direction. Wrathall said Siscoe trudged away against his advice.

The frozen body, crumpled in the snow, was spotted from the air just two and a half miles from the little trapper's camp.

TESTS BLOOD SPURT BY CUTTING THROAT

SAN JOSE, Cal., March 26.—(UP) A physician who had his own throat and head slashed to measure the force of blood spurts today dealt a blow for the prosecution in the retrial of murder charges against David Lamson, former Stanford University employe.

The testimony of Dr. Clement Arnold, prosecution medical witness, was introduced to disprove defense claims that blood stains on the walls of the bathroom in which Mrs. Lamson's body was found were caused by "arterial spurts."

"Last Saturday morning I went to my barber and had my neck shaved," Dr. Arnold said on the witness stand.

"Then to raise my blood pressure to a high level, I ate a large meal, drank many cups of coffee, and smoked several cigarets.

"Then I had a doctor cut a lateral and horizontal incision in my neck. It was an inch-and-a-half-long cut. He then located the occupatal artery in the back of my head and clamped the blood vessel.

"The arterial blood vessel clamp was suddenly released. The blood spurted only six inches vertically and only 18 inches laterally."

The prosecution then produced pictures to show the distance traveled by the blood spurts from Dr. Arnold's head.

The state maintains that blood spattered on the walls of the bathroom where Mrs. Lamson's body was found could have come only from an iron pipe with which Lamson assertedly struck his wife at least four times, causing four separate skull fractures and deep lacerations.

Dr. Arnold's testimony was the most damaging to the defense case yet presented. According to the defense, "arterial spurts" traveled six to eight feet after Mrs. Lamson assertedly fell in the bathtub in the room, striking her head on a nearby wash basin.

House Group To Study Bankruptcy Reforms

WASHINGTON, March 26.—(AP)—A thorough study of proposed changes in the bankruptcy laws, particularly those designed to keep the railroads financially alive, was outlined today as the house judiciary committee's major objective.

Its survey will begin Monday, Chairman Sumners said, with first emphasis placed upon his bill, employing the recommendations of Joseph B. Eastman, co-ordinator of transportation, to safeguard the credit of the carriers by facilitating reorganizations.

"The idea of bankruptcy is changing," Sumners said, "it used to mean that the lawyers got all the meat and the creditors all the bones. Now the idea is to keep the animal alive and kicking."

Nevertheless, he made it clear that the session's schedule included no general revision of the bankruptcy laws, such as was recently proposed by the American Bar Association, in agreement with other organizations.

Swiss Will Protest Arrest of German

BERNE, Switzerland, March 26.—(AP)—The Swiss government today considered formally protesting to Germany the disappearance in Swiss territory March 9 of Berthold Jacob, refugee German journalist known as an anti-nazi.

Berlin yesterday notified this government that Berthold had been arrested on German soil and placed in prison.

A deputy in the Swiss national council today asked the government if the German secret service had abducted Jacob and if the government would make "strong representations" to the Reich demanding his return.

The government was expected to reply later, meanwhile continuing its questioning of Hans Weseman, nazi newspaperman arrested March 21, who, police say, talked with Jacob in Basel the last day the anti-nazi was seen there.

Swis authorities asked Paris police to question friends of Jacob and other persons in Strasbourg and Paris.

Collins Seeks Relief For Georgia Schools

WASHINGTON, March 26.—(AP)—Relief for Georgia's distressed rural schools was discussed today at a conference of Dr. M. D. Collins, state school superintendent, with relief officials.

Collins hoping to obtain $2,500,000, called on Alan Johnstone, southern field representative for relief, and Dr. L. R. Alderman, chief of relief education.

No indication was given as to when the administration will have an announcement of its plans for Georgia school aid.

Lent Upson, relief financial expert, said later Collins presented his case and it now will go forward to Harry L. Hopkins, the administrator.

Hopkins was away from the city and Upson said it was unlikely action in the case will be taken until his return.

CANADA WILL PROVIDE FOR ALL THE DIONNES

Guardian Decides To Remodel Home and Give Papa Spending Money.

TORONTO, Ont., March 26.—(UP) Governmental care which has been lavished upon the Dionne quintuplets will be extended to their father, mother, brothers and sisters, Welfare Commissioner David Croll announced tonight.

Croll, who under the guardianship bill recently passed becomes custodian of the five famous baby girls for the crown of England, thus sought to remove a cause of bitter conflict with the backwoods parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ovila Dionne.

The Dionnes see no reason why "the government is taking our babies away" and regard it as rank injustice that they and their five older children suffer hardships in a ramshackle farmhouse while the quintuplets bask in the luxuries of a miniature hospital.

To meet this objection, the official announced this extensive plan for assisting the Dionne family:

The Dionne home will be enlarged and refinished. If it is found inadequate a new home will be constructed.

All members of the family will be supplied with adequate food and clothing.

A monthly allowance will be paid to Ovila Dionne sufficient to take care of incidental expenses.

All the children will be provided with educational facilities and the five older will be taught English. They now speak French.

In addition, Croll announced the government is considering enlarging the Dafoe hospital to include a large solarium with heavy plate glass windows through which visitors might view the babies.

Little Yvonne, Annette, Cecile, Emilie and Marie, who will be one-year old May 28, are expected to have thousands of visitors this summer. The province plans to improve roads and erect signboards to assist tourists.

Ovila and Mrs. Dionne refused tonight to make any direct comment on the governmental plans. The Dionnes intimated they still were dissatisfied with government "interference" with the quintuplets and hinted efforts to gain control of the babies would be continued.

Belgian Devaluation Now Believed Certain

BRUSSELS, March 26.—(AP)—Probable devaluation of the Belgian currency and possible recognition of soviet Russia and the Japanese-advised state of Manchukuo were forecast in informed circles tonight while the new cabinet was taking the oath of office before King Leopold.

Premier Paul Van Zeeland was regarded as almost certain to call for devaluation of the belga in announcing the program of his government before the Belgian parliament.

A suggestion by the premier for an international currency stabilization conference was expected to be a part of the new government's program.

A declaration of policy had been expected from the cabinet shortly after taking the oath, but this has now been delayed until a formal reading before a joint session of parliament on Friday.

It was believed likely in political circles that Van Zeeland himself would recommend recognition of Manchukuo and the U. S. S. R.

NEW PLAN TO COLLECT POLICE BONDS DEVISED

'Second Forfeiture' in Open Cases To Be Effected in Court Today.

Second forfeiture of $10,000 worth of police court bonds will be begun in police court this morning as the first move in a drive to force bondsmen to pay the city, it was decided Tuesday night at a meeting of council members in the office of City Attorney Jack C. Savage.

The action will precede issuance of fi. fas. and levies which city officials, controlling the police department, propose to make in the effort to force payment.

Savage recommended the action and about $5,000 worth of the bonds will be taken into recorder's court today. They represent open cases, that is, cases in which the defendant has never been produced in court. There are about $5,000 worth of the bonds in what are termed closed cases, where the defendant has been produced, but subsequent to the time limit allowed for such production. It is expected they will be presented later and that demand for their payment will follow the open case demands.

Councilman G. Dan Bridges, chairman of council's police committee, asserted Tuesdty the entire bond matter probably will be reopened at the regular meeting of the police committee Thursday night.

He was prompted in his statement by production of two affdavits by Oscar H. Pendley, secretary to Chief T. O. Sturdivant, purporting to show that two persons paid the full face value of bonds written by Mobley & Lunsford, professional bondsmen, with the understanding the money was to have been paid into the municipal treasury at once. Pendley asserts no such payment has been made and that both cases are still open.

P. M. George, of 70 1-2 Pryor street, N. E., asserted in one affidavit he paid $505, and E. R. Cook, 501 Seminole avenue, claimed he paid $215 to representatives of the same firm.

Bridges indicated he will seek a reopening of the entire bond matter to see "if city funds have been illegally withheld."

CAIN FINDS MACON ON OPENING TOUR OF WORLD JAUNT

(Arthur Cain, who set out from Atlanta Monday with an around-the-world jaunt as his objective, reached Macon on his first day's journey and sent a brief message back to The Constitution. Cain, native Atlantan, will write of the high spots of his journeys for The Constitution.)

By ARTHUR CAIN.

A round of the produce men on Produce row didn't stir up a ride Savannahward. Neither did a tour of the Atlanta hotels, where I inquired of the clerks regarding the itineraries of their traveling guests. A transfer accepted with no questions on the Hapeville street car really launched my 25,000-mile trek, which at this writing has shrunk to 24,901, as I have reached Macon, the heart of Georgia, thanks to a good thumb and the generosity of motorists who were going in my direction.

From Macon, it's Savannah. There, it is the hope of this vagrant, that there will be a chance to board a freighter New York bound. If not, There's still the broad highway—about 900 miles of it—running ribbonlike from Georgia's first port to port No. 1 of the United States. So we still have the highway and the trusty thumb on which we can rely if the skippers of the freighters don't look kindly on our offer to become a laboring member of their respective crew.

Once in New York, it will only be a matter of covering the remaining 24,000 miles, but there is hardly time here to discuss ways and means of disposing of that detail, for now your correspondent is faced with the details of finding a place to bed down for the night so the intervening distance between here and Savannah can be taken in stride tomorrow.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of our wife and mother, who passed away two years ago today.
